Berlin Stirred by U. S. Plane Sale

(Copyright, 1936, by International News Service)

Berlin, Dec. 29 (INS)—Granting of a license by the American State Department for shipment of airplanes and airplane motors to Spanish Loyalists created an uproar in Berlin today and was regarded immediately as strengthening the Reich's hand in Spain.

This action of the United States may be the final factor in influencing Chancellor Adolf Hitler to decide to continue shipment of war supplies and German "volunteers" to Spain over protests of Britain and France, it was stated in high quarters.

The furore over the Washington move began with publication of the afternoon newspapers' editions. These papers pounded the issue over first pages using big head lines.

"Alarm in England: America delivers war materials to the Reds," screamed the Nachtausgabe.

"U. S. A sends Reds 18 airplanes, 55 engines," read the Angriff's streamer.

Other papers gave similar prominence to the news.

The following noncommittal item was given to International News Service in high quarters:

Despite the definitely established fact Russia is intervening in the Spanish war, the United States thinks she can maintain the viewpoint that the Spanish war is a civil war, in which the

Pint's Payoff to Man Hit by Auto

Ansonia, Conn., Dec. 29 (AP)—Alton Warfel told police today of a pedestrian who regarded replacement of a pint of liquor full compensation for having been knocked down by an automobile.

Warfel said his car struck a man. The impact broke a pint bottle in the victim's pocket.

Warfel said the man would not tell his name, refused to be taken to a physician, but insisted the motorist pay him full value for the pint.

FLAMING MAN FLEES FIRE

Jack Sidgwick Cassell "broke" into the newspapers when he was married to awaiting and notably prominent Worcester widow, Mrs. Frances Louise Legg.

On the eve of the wedding, however, the salesman was named in a $40,000 breach of promise suit brought by Miss Vera Pritchard of Grafton.

Pending the outcome of this suit, what damages Cassell might have received from his fiancee in the event the suit were attached by the Grafton girl.

G-MEN FEAR FOR KIDNAPED BOY'S LIFE

BULLETIN

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 29 (AP)—A theory that the kidnaper of 10-year-old Charles Mattson was the man foiled twice in recent attempts to abduct a 6-year-old neighbor boy was divulged today when police renewed examination of a ladder used in the previously undisclosed kidnap efforts. The ladder was seized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George G. Franklin, Jr., late in November.

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 29 (AP)—Department of Justice Agents, taking full charge of the wide search for 10-year-old Charles Mattson and his bearded gunman kidnaper, brought all apparent activity to a halt today.

Obviously fearing for the little victim's safety, they directed Dr. W. W. Mattson, wealthy physician, whose son was snatched from his home Sunday night for $28,000 ransom, to make no effort to contact the kidnaper until told to do so.

They halted a foot-by-foot search of youth in a nearby ravine, fearing the kidnaper might kill his captive if he had the boy hidden there and heard his pursuers approaching.

Policemen guarding the Mattson mansion were withdrawn.

FATHER POWERLESS

Most of the press cars, foot police and private boats which had been searching the Tacoma area for signs of the kidnaper also ceased activities.

The justice agents, under C. C. Sears of Portland, with customary taciturnity, offered no explanation of the sudden cessation of activities.

Dr. Mattson told newspapermen "I haven't made any contacts. Things are just as they were.

Hope Ebbs at Vatican

Pius' Illness Takes More Serious Turn

BULLETINS

London, Dec. 29 (INS)—The condition of Pope Pius took a "turn for the worse," tonight, according to a Reuters News Agency dispatch from Vatican City.

By The Associated Press

Vatican City, Dec. 29—Best informed Vatican circles, it was learned today, are prepared for the death of Pope Pius XI at any moment.

By FRANK GERVASI

Copyright, 1936, by International News Service

Vatican City, Dec. 29—Adding to the complexity of ailments from which he is suffering, gangrenous ulcers have developed in Pope Pius' left leg, International News Service learned today from an unimpeachable source.

Dr. Amanti Milani, the Pontiff's physician, definitely diagnosed this serious development in the Holy Father's illness when the doctor visited the Papal bedroom at the Vatican at mid-day.

Amputation of the leg is being considered seriously as a desperate measure to prolong the Pope's life, it was learned.

Every possible other measure will be taken first, however, in an attempt to cure the ulcers, which are adding greatly to the Pontiff's incredible suffering.

Unless the ulcers which developed gangrenous symptoms during the past three days respond to treatment, the leg must be amputated, it was stated.

RISK OF FATAL SHOCK

At the same time, it was admitted an amputation would be carried out at risk of a possible fatal shock.

Authoritative medical quarters stated the Pope will have reached the crisis in his valiant fight against his numerous ailments with the complications of old age—be it 78—by January 10.

It was explained the ulcers developed after several external veins in the lower part of the limb broke open and the resultant wounds refused to heal.

PLANS SACRED CONSISTORY

Meanwhile, in a remarkable display of courage and fortitude, the Pope in what may be the last major official act of his life plans to hold a sacred consistory to complete the college of cardinals as soon as his condition permits.

The Pontiff, it was revealed today, has expressed to Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, his desire to hold the consistory in his bedroom adjoining his private chapel.

There are at present 66 cardinals. Four short of the full college. One or two additional cardinals have already been named, it is believed "in pectore"—their names known only to the pope.

If he holds two, according to the papal prerogative, "locked in his heart," then only two more prelates will have to be elevated to the purple.

Unless he shows a substantial improvement immediately, however the Pope may never carry out his wish, authoritative Vatican sources admitted.

Of the entire college, only 34 cardinals are at present "in curia"—in Rome. Of these, 22 are Italians, one is a Spaniard, and the other is the youngest of the cardinals, Mgr. Tisserant of France, said to be a favorite of the Pope.

After receiving Cardinal Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State, briefly this morning, the Pope received Cardinal Laurenti, chief of the congregation of rites. It was the first reception by the Pontiff announced any high prelate since his illness became acute.

The congregation of rites deals with beatification and canonization of saints. Since four or five names already have been suggested for beatification, it was assumed Cardinal Laurenti conferred with the Pope regarding this.

Freezing Rain Boston Bound

Freezing rain, predicted for tonight or tomorrow by the weather man, promised hazardous motoring conditions in this section.

The sudden change from the mild Christmas weather to today's low temperatures caused much discomfort, but the weather bureau reminded Boston that three years ago the mercury dropped to 17 degrees below zero on this date.

3 BANDITS ROB WOMAN OF $5418 IN R. I.

Central Falls, R. I., Dec. 29—Waylaying her at the plant entrance, three armed bandits robbed Mrs. Mary Keron, treasurer of the Central Falls Bottling Company, of $5418.70—$2900 in cash and the rest in checks—today.

The bandits, two of whom were masked, fled toward South Attleboro, Mass., in a sedan carrying Massachusetts registration plates reported stolen June 19 in Attleboro.

Evidently well planned, the holdup was staged at the driveway entrance in North street, where a bad place in the roadway necessitates a car slowing as it emerges into the street.

MENACE SALESMAN

Also at the driveway entrance is a vacant house, and from this the three armed bandits emerged as Mrs. Keron slowed her machine on leaving the plant with the bank deposit.

At gunpoint, she was ordered from the car and the money bag was seized.

Just then, James Healey, a company salesman, drove up to the entrance. Two of the bandits covered him and ordered him to "keep moving."

Healey did so, driving round a corner and running into a store, from where he telephoned police.

POLICE HOLD TRIO

Meanwhile, the bandits, all wearing sweaters, overalls and stocking caps, jumped into their sedan, parked in front of the vacant house, and fled, disappearing into High street.

Cumberland police later took three men into custody for questioning after an inspector, William J. Boyle, had stopped their car for speeding.

Mrs. Keron will view them in a lineup.

JUDGE GILLEN SLATED FOR SISK POST

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Municipal Judge Daniel J. Gillen will take Judge James H. Sisk's place on the superior court bench and Lieutenant-Governor Joseph L. Hurley will move into Judge Gillen's post.

This eleventh-hour indication came as the executive council waited for Judge Sisk's resignation and at the same time that Judge Frederic A. Fisher, 81-year old Lowell district court justice served notice he would not appear.

Through Attorney Joseph P. Donahue, Judge Fisher sent the message that he had not received "reasonable" "24-hour" notification and that if it were not forthcoming he would appeal to Supreme Court Justice John Wilkins. F. Fenn of Newton district court make appearance before the Governor and councilors although he had been eliminated to prove his ability to continue on the bench.

The session was called primarily in furtherance of the Governor's plan "to weed out aged and infirm members of the bench."

The governor returned to Boston by plane last night after spending the day in Washington conferring with government officials and the President regarding an appropriation for completion of the harbor dredging project now in progress. He was assured the matter would

She Shoots Down 4 in Courtroom

Jackson, Ky., Dec. 29 (AP)—Johnny Shepherd, charged with murder, fell in court here today under a rain of bullets fired by the mother of the man he is alleged to have killed. Stray bullets wounded two spectators and bruised another.

The Breathitt county court, scene of bitter feud trials in the old days, had just been called to order by County Judge George W. Little for Shepherd's examining trial.

Deputy Sheriff John E. Rice said Mrs. Viola Wickline, 35, mother of Harvey Gabbard, 17, opened fire without a word, her eyes bulging and her face pale.

Shepherd, 18, fell in a heap. George Smouse, 27, a spectator, was critically wounded and Moss Noble, an attorney, fell with a bullet in his leg. A bullet bruised the knee of Howard Moore, a spectator.

WOMAN, 3 HELD

The spectators, about 150 in number, fled pell mell. Shepherd was sent to a hospital and upon reports received that he had died, Judge Little swore out murder warrants against Mrs. Wickline, three others, after it developed Shepherd still lived, but was expected to die and the four were sent to jail and the warrants held.

William Wickline, husband of the accused woman; Mrs. Mattie Downs Haddix and Buck Gabbard, a one-legged man, were the other three named in the hastily drawn warrants.

Deputy Rice said Moore declared Mrs. Haddix had fired one of the shots, but other eye-witnesses denied she had. All four refused to talk about the case.

BROTHERS HELD IN MURDER

Gabbard, a son by a former marriage of Mrs. Wickline, was shot to death on Christmas Eve. Shepherd, a cripple, was accused of murder, and his brother, Noah Shepherd, of being an accessory. Shepherd's mother, Mrs. Charles Shepherd, was killed by an automobile three years ago.

Smouse, who was shot in the chest, said at the hospital he had to be suffering from a pierced lung but was expected to recover unless pneumonia set in. He is married and has three children.

Noble was taken home after a bullet had been removed from his leg. Moore, 62-year-old former jailer, said his kneecap was bruised by the bullet that went through his hat which he had hung on his knee.

East Boston Boy Hit by Truck, Dies

Apparently uninjured when struck late yesterday by a truck, nine-year-old Joseph Cutillo, of 37 Gladstone street, East Boston, was taken suddenly ill early today and died a short time later at Winthrop Community Hospital.

The boy was struck by a tank truck operated, according to police, by Leroy F. Miller of Princeton street, Malden. Miller took the boy to his home, where the youth declared he was unhurt.

'BRIBE' FACTS SOUGHT IN BROOKLINE

Moving swiftly in response to a challenge from the Brookline selectmen, District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing today began investigation of the bank accounts of several members of the Brookline police department, in his probe of alleged protection for white-slavers and other law-breakers.

This action followed reports that at least one member of the department, drawing the pay of one of the lower ranks, was living far beyond the standard such his police income would warrant.

The Brookline selectmen, after having Police Chief H. Allen Butterfield defend his own department, started an investigation, admitting that it was improper to bring out and publicly point them with solid evidence.

The attitude aroused resentment among many residents of the town who are demanding that vice and gambling be driven out for the protection of the young people.

Other Brookline citizens, however, sided with the selectmen, taking the stand, with regard to spots of vice conditions, that "I can't happen here."

Woman, 65, Dies On Way to Church

Mrs. Anna Ford, 65, of 235 Washington street, Brighton, was found dead on the grounds of St. Gabriel Monastery, Brighton, today. She apparently had fallen while on the way to attend mass.

Dr. William Dunn, of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, pronounced the woman dead.

on the part of any officers in the Brookline police department and would take no further action in the matter unless such evidence was furnished to them, Dewing said.

"Well, I think that is a very proper statement at this time."

He then revealed that he might bring about a showdown in the situation today with the possibility that the probe might extend beyond the police department to other persons, some of them reported prominent in affairs in the town.

"I am going to hold conferences in my office at Dedham today," Dewing said. "I have summoned several people to attend this conference.

"I can't disclose their identities now but I will say they are very important in this investigation. And I expect to be able to make an extremely important statement at the conclusion of the conference, probably some time this afternoon."

In the event of such a session at least 35 witnesses would be summoned to testify before the grand jury, including the young Passaic, N. J., girl who was brought to Boston by the white slave ring and whose story proved of material aid to the probe.

Other witnesses, it is understood, would include residents of Brookline who have complained of the alleged conditions of vice and several police officers who reported to superiors concerning apparent violations of the law observed on their routes.

From the same source it was learned that Dewing is confident he has sufficient evidence in his possession to go before such a grand jury session and seek indictments against at least two members of the police department.

JUDGE DANIEL A. ROLLINS

POLICE CHIEF RUTHERFORD

RUTHERFORD TESTIMONY

The statement of the board of selectmen was based entirely on the testimony of Chief Rutherford during the star session held at the Town Hall yesterday, members of the board admitted. It read:

"The board has at present no evidence of wrongdoing on the part of any officer of the police department and therefore will not take any action unless further evidence of such wrongdoing is furnished by the district attorney of Norfolk County, who now has the whole matter under investigation."

Following the issuing of the statement, Judge Daniel A. Rollins, chairman of the board, granted the request of newspapermen that they be permitted to ask questions and with Chief Rutherford answered a number of queries.

During this questing period, both Chief Rutherford and Judge Rollins indicated that the question of vice in the town's many apartment buildings had cropped up occasionally but that every effort to correct such conditions had been made.

Both stood by the prepared statement of the selectmen, as did other members of the board. They also declared that they welcomed any evidence from any citizen of Brookline or other communities concerning wrongdoing by members of the police department or existence of conditions of vice in the community.

Judge Rollins denied that anyone in particular was under suspicion in connection with charges and reports of graft and corruption in the police department. He also declared that no officers had been suspended and repeated that the board had found no evidence of wrongdoing to warrant such action.

Pierre, S. D., Dec. 29 (AP)—Governor Tom Berry today appointed Herbert Hitchcock, of Mitchell, Democratic State chairman, U. S. Senator to succeed Peter Norbeck, (R, S.D.), who died Dec. 20.

Try Pastor for Arson

Manchester, N. H., Dec. 29—Presentation of testimony was to be started in Superior Court today in the trial of the Rev. Roman Sinienski, pastor of the Polish Church of the Transfiguration, on charges of arson, growing out of a fire which occurred in the church last August.

'2-GUN' SHERIFF CHALLENGED

The spotlight on the continual wrangle between John J. Mullen, chairman of the Bangus board of selectmen, and Selectman C. F. Nelson Reeves quickly swung over to Swampscott today.

And all because Mullen had advised that the "Wyoming" cousin, Sheriff Dan Mullen of Cody County, Wyo., was on his way to Bangus "to protect" him from alleged threats of assault.

It all started when someone innocently asked Police Chief Walter F. Reeves of Swampscott what he thought of the whole business.

Retorted Chief Reeves:

"I don't think very much of it and from what I've seen of these gun-toting Sheriffs of the West, they're greatly overrated as gunmen.

"And I would be willing to take Sheriff Dan to the Lynn police station shooting gallery and shoot with one gun, two guns or a rifle."

Reeves, other officers pointed out, is one of the crack shots in the state and has given many shooting exhibitions before various police forces in Massachusetts.

Selectman Mullen said he expected his cousin today, but believed he was delayed.

Mullen himself is carrying a gun "for protection." The trouble all started when Mullen charged he was attacked by Peters and that a nearby officer, Patrolman William Cahill, neglected his duty in the matter of coming to his rescue.

He Lives, But Maybe He's Been Hanged

Shanghai, Dec. 29 (AP)—Local British authorities wanted to know today whether corpulent Atma Singh had been hanged.

As Singh, a British Indian and to-be Local police officer, plunged through the scaffold trap door for murder, the rope parted.

He suffered a brain concussion but was expected to recover.

Perplexed officials appealed to the British embassy for an answer to the question—must Singh be hanged or has he been hanged?

The embassy is looking it up.

Priest, 5 Others Injured in Crash

Five persons, including the Rev. John J. Crouly of the Academy of the Assumption, Wellesley Hills, were recovering today from injuries suffered in an auto collision at Kidder and Willow avenues, Somerville.

The priest, riding in an auto operated by Miss Mary Buckley, of Ashland, was most seriously hurt with a possible knee fracture, lacerations and abrasions.

Others riding in the two machines included Miss Mary Finneran, of Ashland, Laird Walsh, Rogers avenue, Somerville, and Miss Loretta Hennessey, Taylor street, Medford.

Trio Hurt in Auto Get $5692 Award

Westerly, R. I., Dec. 29—Damages totalling $5692 had been awarded today to three Bronxville, N. Y., residents by Superior Court Judge Walter Curry.

The plaintiffs, who were injured in an automobile accident in July, 1935, were Hiram C. Pfeiffer, who was awarded $3500; Ramsay Peugnet, her husband, who was given $818, and Mrs. Edith Benner, who was given $1374. The defendant was Rhoda Barber, of Greenville, N. C.

Drowns Testing Christmas Skates

Worcester, Dec. 29—Arrangements were being completed here today for the funeral of Kenneth Bredberg, 13, of Mulford avenue, who was drowned in Woodward pond when he crashed through the ice while trying out a new pair of skates he had received for a Christmas present.

CRASHES INJURE 4; HUNT HIT-RUN TAXI

Four persons were injured, including a victim of a hit and run taxi, in two South End automobile accidents today.

Edward U. Williams, 17, of Dix street, Dorchester, was seated in a parked car at Clarendon street and Columbus avenue when the machine was struck by a taxi which failed to stop. Police started a search for the driver.

The youth was taken to Haymarket Relief Hospital where he was found suffering from a compound fracture of the nose.

In a collision at Broadway and Albany street, a man and two girls, were injured.

Mary Saretti, 19, of Hillside street, Hyde Park, was taken to City Hospital with concussion of the brain and a lacerated scalp. Her sister, Florence, 18, was removed to Carney Hospital suffering from shock and bruises and was later released.

The alleged operator of the car in which they were riding, Anthony J. Lemly of Pacific street, South Boston, escaped injury.

Hyman Remick of Hiawatha street, Dorchester, who police said was operator of the other car, suffered concussion of the brain and laceration of the scalp and was taken to City Hospital.

New Grenz Rays

Magic 'Third Eye' Found by Doctor

Atlantic City, N. J., Dec. 29 [INS]—Discovery of a magic "third eye" for man, which enables him for the first time to look inside living forms that defy X-rays, was revealed today at the convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

How the device utilizes invisible rays to make insects more transparent than jellyfish was demonstrated by Dr. G. F. McLeod of Cornell University and H. F. Sherwood of the Eastman Kodak laboratories, Rochester, N. Y.

Midget pests are turned "inside out," in effect, enabling scientists to study what poisons make the best insecticides. Vital organs can be watched as they react to various chemicals fed the insects.

Such details of the "machinery of life" in action, clearer than any X-ray pictures of human beings, have been made possible by bombarding roaches and meal worms with Grenz rays, which mark the borderline between ultra violet and X-rays.

Softer Rays

The latter pass right through every part of an insect's body, Dr. McLeod explained, so that vital organs cannot be outlined in "shadow form."

Grenz rays are "softer," however. They can be regulated in intensity so that they penetrate to any desired depth of an insect's body, with the result that any vital organ at any level can be seen with the unaided eye, on a small "X-ray type" of fluoroscopic screen, or can be photographed.

The two scientists also showed direct "X-ray" motion pictures, the first of their kind of meal worms digesting food and reacting to anesthetics given them to eliminate any skin of movie "temperament" before the camera.

Grenz rays, the discovery of Dr. Gustav Bucky of New York, have been found to be useful in the treatment of disease.

War on Bugs

Sherwood found by accident two years ago that the structure of textiles could be studied with them because of their slight penetration. Further research showed they could be used to examine the insides of insects for which X-rays proved a failure.

First application to the study of living organisms was begun by Dr. McLeod and Sherwood only three weeks ago, they said.

Despite the assertions of entomologists at the convention that insects will "never run out of the earth," another invention exhibited to the scientists also showed every effort is being made to keep destructive bugs in check.

A device so delicate that it measures the heart beat of an insect, as well as its degree of expansion and contraction, was demonstrated by Johnson of Brockton.

Dr. J. F. Yeager of the U. S. Department of Agriculture research station, Bellsville, Md., who developed it during the past six months.

A cockroach, all of its body stripped away but its back and its heart, lies in a beeswax mould. The heart is a series of tiny "cones," fitting into each other to make a tube running the full length down the center of the body where you might expect a backbone.

A tiny piece of tissue paper rests on one of the heart sections, over it a drop of white wax. Stuck to this is a human hair, connected with a glass lever so thin it can hardly be seen.

As the heart beats, expanding and contracting, the shadow of the moving lever is projected into a camera in which a moving roll of film makes a permanent record—a motion picture that shows how the heart was working, but as the spectrocardiograph reminds the condition of a human heart.

Planes to Go 500 M. P. H., Says Wright

Atlantic City, Dec. 29 (AP)—Within 10 years airplanes will carry passengers at 300 miles an hour, land plane speed records will rise to 425 miles an hour and seaplane speeds to 500 miles.

Beyond the 500-mile speeds they may not go, the American Association for the Advancement of Science was informed today, until a new and now unknown form of flying is developed.

The forecasts were made by T. P. Wright, director of engineering of the Curtis-Wright Corporation.

Take-offs he predicted probably will be made by catapulting. Certainly he said, 18-hour transcontinental and 18-hour transatlantic crossings are "not far off."

One of the world's quickest electric motors, powered with a battery smaller than those used in Washington's type flashlights, is science's newest device in stratosphere weather exploration.

The motor, as described by its inventor, Dr. L. F. Curtiss of the National Bureau of Standards at Washington, weighs less than an ounce and a half and enables weather men to make more complete observations than ever before of the air overhead.

MISS ARLENE EADE
Transferred to Boston

President's New Guard and Girl Shifted Wrong

Romance would give a girl the laugh that way—so now President Roosevelt's new bodyguard is in Washington, where his girl friend used to be, and she is up here where he used to be.

Thomas J. "Tom" Qualters, Notre Dame fullback under Coach Knute Rockne, and until recently a Massachusetts state trooper, is the President's new bodyguard, replacing Gus Gennerich, deceased.

Five feet 10 inches tall and weighing 185 pounds, Qualters jointed the state police three years ago.

In Washington was Miss Arlene Eade of 29 Rogers avenue, Lynn, employed in the Customs Department. Interested in each other, the two were much too far apart as to cities.

Joy Too Soon

Miss Eade worked for a transfer to Boston, but the months rolled by before she was successful.

Then the particular office she was with was closed, and she won a transfer to the comptroller's office in the Boston customs house.

The couple were in great glee. Were were a few miles such as lines between Andover and Lynn, or Andover and Boston.

But then came the chance that Tom Qualters could not afford to pass up. As bodyguard for James Roosevelt, the President's son, during the campaign, the husky trooper won strong favor.

When Gus Gennerich dropped dead in South America, Qualters was selected to fill the post.

So now Qualters is in Washington, instead of Arlene—and Arlene is up here, instead of Tom.

Delay Bridal

Tom wanted Arlene to accept an engagement ring this Christmas, she refused today, but she put him off for a couple of months, because he was on a new job, and the publicity might not do him any good.

The bodyguard's home is at 175 Boston avenue, Somerville. Arlene lives with her family at the Lynn address. Her mother is a widow, and the girl was graduated from Lynn Classical high school.

Tom was graduated from St. Mary's school, Somerville, and St. John's Preparatory school, before advancing to Notre Dame.

But how he is there where she was—and she is here, where he was.

Romance is funny.

Makeup Time for Junior Leaguers

This is what the cameraman saw when he went backstage of the Copley Theater today, where Junior Leaguers are presenting their annual Christmas holiday production, "The Blue Bird." Jane Ragle, who plays the role of Tyltyl in the play, is shown applying a bit of makeup to the face of Mytyl, better known as Junior Leaguer Faith Thoron. Proceeds from the play will benefit the Community Health Association.

LUPE VELEZ HELD IN $1800 CASE

Star Posts Bail, Then Dashes to Ill Husband

New York, Dec. 29 (US) — Lupe Velez is free on bail today after having been arrested in civil proceedings at the sick bed of "Tarzan" Johnny Weissmuller, her husband, in their hotel.

The tiger woman of the screen tamely submitted to a deputy sheriff. She was taken to city court, where she posted an $1800 bond against a judgment of that amount obtained by a creditor.

The judgment was issued last July on application of Joseph Golden, an accountant.

He served the actress with notice soon after, on the pier and on the liner which she was boarding for a European excursion.

Miss Velez ignored the summons, which required her to appear in city court in supplementary proceedings.

When she came to New York recently, the accountant obtained an order of arrest, on the ground that she was a non-resident of the state.

Court Warns Love-Brick Thrower

Brockton, Dec. 29—Love gives license for all sorts of oddities in behaviour, but not to the extent of hurling sidewalk bricks through windows.

Judge Edward G. Rowe made that clear today to 24-year-old Felix Darrieau of Main street, further stressing the fact by giving the youth six months' probation on condition of no more such antics.

Mary, who is 18, told the judge that Darrieau has made her the object of his affections, without encouragement, for some time, and that last night he came calling.

She locked the front door and he went to the back, she said. When she locked the back door, he seized the brick and let fly at a front window, ruining it.

"Whatever made you do that?" asked Judge Rowe of Darrieu.

"I'm crazy about Mary," the defendant replied. "I just had to see her."

"You'll see the inside of a cell if you don't keep away from the Trojanos," the court warned. "Six months probation."

Burns Quits SEC Counsel Post

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—The White House announced today the acceptance by President Roosevelt of the resignation of John J. Burns of Boston, general counsel of the securities commission. The resignation will be effective soon after the first of the year.

In a letter to Burns the President expressed appreciation for the "splendid service you have rendered pioneering as the first general counsel of the commission."

Expressing the hope that Burns might be of help to the government again in the future, the President said:

"Your fine legal talent and organizing ability have been of the greatest value during these early days of this great adventure in social organization."

Police Guard Buses In Brooklyn Strike

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—Radio patrol cars trailed buses in Brooklyn today and armed police guards rode buses over the more isolated routes as union drivers of the Brooklyn Manhattan Transit bus lines were called out on strike.

'Blue Bird' Charity Play at Copley

Boston socialites today thronged the Copley Theater at the morning and matinee performances of "The Blue Bird," annual Christmas holiday production by the Junior League Players.

Other performances will be held tomorrow morning and afternoon, with all the proceeds going toward the benefit of the Community Health Association.

For the first time children of league members appeared in several of the scenes today.

"Leads" in the show are Faith Thoron as Mytyl and Jane Ragle as Tyltyl. Both will also take part in the lucky number drawings and awarding of prizes at tomorrow's performances. Rachel Warner, league president, did the "honors" today.

2 Hurt as Worker Falls Into Ditch

Falling into an 11-foot ditch on Wood avenue, Hyde Park, today, Saito Lamonica, 25, of London street, East Boston, was injured, but he caused more serious injuries to Barno Pirro, 59, of Decatur street, Charlestown, on whom he landed.

Both men are Works Progress Administration employes. Pirro has a possible fracture of the spine. Lamonica has a possible fracture of the right leg. Both have multiple bruises.

WIFE BARES GUN PLAY

Seeks to Divorce Arthur F. Knight

"Testifying her husband held a revolver to her head and threatened her with death, and on another occasion tore her dress to shreds before guests, Mrs. Doris G. Knight of Needham asked a divorce today in Dedham probate court.

Arthur F. Knight, the husband, in to tell his story to Judge Joseph B. McCloskey later. They were married October 12, 1928, and have a daughter, whose custody Mrs. Knight requests. She also asks alimony and support for the child.

She testified her husband tore her dress off and ripped it to pieces before friends while they were living in the exclusive Chestnut Hill section, and as a result they were ordered out by the landlord.

She and her husband had been drinking heavily at the time. Last May, she told Judge McCloskey, her husband arrived at their Needham home after having been drinking and wanted to take their daughter fishing.

"I refused to let her go unless I went too," she said. "He knocked me down and started out with the child. I ran and sat in the car and he dragged me out and threw me on the ground.

"I got up and ran in to telephone the police and he tore the instrument out of my hands and pushed it in my face, cutting my lip. Because of that he was placed on probation for a year in Dedham court."

Gettings Held In $9500 Robbery

Fall River, Dec. 29 (AP)—Frank P. Gettings of Russell avenue, Brookline, pleaded not guilty today to participation in the $9500 payroll robbery of the Shelburne Shirt Company here August 7, 1936.

Gettings was held in $50,000 bail for continued hearing next Tuesday.

Hospital Fights Waltham License

To John De Vincentis Waltham tea room—which sold more than two—two Metropolitan Hospital nurses and three Middlesex County Sanatorium patients owe their discharge, the Alcoholic Beverages Commission was told today.

In hearing was De Vincent's appeal from refusal of the Waltham licensing Board to grant him renewal of his liquor license at 610 Trapelo road, opposite the hospital and adjoining the sanatorium.

Miss Anna S. Manion, secretary of the hospital's board of trustees, testified that two nurses returned from the tearoom so intoxicated that they were discharged.

Dr. Roy B. Halloran, superintendent of the hospital, declared the tearoom house disturbed patients and attaches.

SAY DEAL 'TEMPORARY'

Philosophers Discuss Economics

Economics edged its way into a convention of philosophy scholars today—the 36th annual meeting of the eastern division of the American Philosophical Association at Harvard—with the news that the New Deal "is only temporary."

Prof. H. von Beckerath of Duke University, North Carolina, professor of economics, reading the paper "Economic Thought and Economic Development During the Last 150 Years," declared:

"The American people are willing to accept administered shifts in property conditions and competitive conditions as well as a redrawing of the demarcation lines between what is governmental in social life and what is private.

OUTGEARED SOCIAL FABRIC

"They feel such injuries ought to be kept in limit and that the New Deal aims only in temporary effort for restoration of outgeared social fabric.

"As long as this is the impression, the American people will not abandon under the impact of New Deal policies their traditional beliefs and traditional ideas of law, and their public and private rights."

Carl F. Taeusch, of the division of program planning of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, another speaker today, brought philosophy into his discussion when he said:

"Modern philosophy, if it is to have any practical value to modern civilization, must truly describe human relationship."

BRITON HONORED

Professor Alfred N. Whitehead of Harvard, noted British mathematician and philosopher who is retiring from active teaching next fall, was honored today with the unveiling of his portrait at the Harvard faculty room following an afternoon tea.

The professor's work was discussed by Professor John Dewey of Columbia, Professor Gregory Vlastos of Queen's College, Ontario, and Professor A. P. Usheneks of Michigan.

Impressive Rites For Brisbane

Edwin C. Hill, famous newspaper columnist and radio commentator, and author of the column, "Human Side of the News," which appears daily in the Boston Evening American, has written the following story of the funeral of Arthur Brisbane, America's most famous journalist, who was buried yesterday at his New Jersey estate, Allaire. The rites at Allaire were simple, attended only by members of the family and a few close friends. Mr. Hill's story of the services in New York follow:

By EDWIN C. HILL
(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service)

New York, Dec. 29 (US)—One in a multitude, you sat in St. Bartholomew's, as the living came to pay their respects to the dead—to one of the greatest newspaper men of our time, Arthur Brisbane.

Outside the noble church, along the sidewalks of Park avenue, thousands stood bathed in the astonishing sunshine of late December, looking on in perfect silence as the people entered the church, alighting from their glistening cars or approaching on foot.

The governor of the state, the mayor of the city, the brilliant lights of the arts and the professions, the captain-generals of commerce and industry. And the obscure with the famous, and the great, the poor and the struggling elbow to elbow with the rich and the successful.

You sat in St. Bartholomew's as 2000 were escorted to their pews in such quiet that the merest whisper had strange reverberations.

Very gradually, with barely definite perception, you were aware of organ music, lovely and haunting, stealing away the sense, making naught of time; low and gentle music, Wagner's Prelude to Parsifal; and somehow these strains were on wave, became a background of reverential melody for the thoughts that came.

And you drifted back through the years to the day when you first met this man and marveled at the flashing competency of his work as a reporter of stirring events. And that was way back in 1912, down in Baltimore.

Service Begins

You thought of the years that followed and your never-ceasing admiration for that intellect with its terse, cutting qualities, its avoidance of all but the simplest words, and the direct drive at the object to be attained; for that mind which would edit a great newspaper, or a group of great newspapers, and look the answerer straight in reporting any episode, any event of news, great or small, and up by the swarm and struggle of human life.

The church was filling now, and your gaze moved again to the chancel and noted the sheer simplicity of the funeral setting.

You turned from that picture of peace and beauty to look upon rows of pews in all those people, of every station and degree, there to pay homage to Arthur Brisbane. And you observed with no surprise whatever that there were men sitting in the church who had felt the sting of his reproof and the flick of his irony but who had become at the last hour to pay him honor.

As softly and imperceptibly as the sureness of rain the organist, Dr. David McKinley Wilson, swept his fingertips over the keys and released the melody of one of the oldest and dearest of hymns, "Nearer My God to Thee." The rector of St. Bartholomew's, the Rev. Dr. G. P. T. Sargent was visible at the head of the catafalque. The clergy was just striding in somewhere outside in the sacristy. The service had begun.

All those in the pews and the many standing in the aisles, and at the back of the church were aware, as the processional swelled in volume, of the majesty and the grandeur of the pathos of death.

Then by two they walked. First came William Randolph Hearst, Arthur Brisbane's friend and colleague for forty years, elbow to elbow with Bernard Gimbel, who had been a lifetime friend.

Behind them paced the mayor of the city of New York, Fiorello M. LaGuardia, with the governor of the state, Herbert H. Lehman, and after them the long procession of others who had been Mr. Brisbane's friends and associates.

Walter Lichtenstein, chairman of the directing board of the Hearst enterprises, Joseph V. Connolly, director of the Hearst News Service, and Hearst executives: Vincent Astor, Senator W. Warren Barbour of New Jersey, Judge Charles C. Shorey, Gerard Swope, many more.

As they found their appointed places in the front pews, were among many others of note were seated the Postmaster-General of the United States James A. Farley and Grover A. Whalen, the subject of whom has contributed many souls from this earth to the next, published and sadly noted. At the head of the entering train was Dr. Sargent, solemnly intoning in his full voice, with the moving sincerity which is so much a part of him, the order for the burial of the dead:

Note of Dignity

"I am the resurrection and the life, saith the Lord: he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in Me, shall never die . . ."

The solemnity of the burial office failed into the all embracing silence of the church, but that silence was softly terminated by the full choir of St. Bartholomew's, 60 voices melding and soaring in a chant of the 23d psalm . . . "The Lord Is My Shepherd . . ." followed then the reading by the rector of the lesson, from the 14th chapter of St. John, and then that other hymn which as never hearts when the living must part with the dead, "Lead Kindly Light."

It was in that atmosphere that Dr. Sargent commenced the sentences from the burial service: "Unto Almighty God we commend the soul of our brother departed, and we commit his body to the ground; earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust, in sure and certain hope of the resurrection unto eternal life, through our Lord Jesus Christ . . ."

And over the last words of the rector rose the triumphant promise of the choir, "I heard a voice saying unto me . . ." The service was nearing its end.

Came then the gently falling together the solid earth, and the processional hymn, "Hark, Hark, My Soul . . ." The service was almost over.

Once more the pallbearers of honor, two by two, walked down the aisle to disappear in the sunshine, following the mortal remains of the great editor and the incomparable legend of life to the simple northern woods which was waiting to escort him to the Brisbane country home in Allaire, New Jersey.

There, in the afternoon, prayers were said in the presence of the immediate family. And the burial followed to a plot of ground on the Brisbane estate at Allaire.

Editor Laid to Rest Amid Pine-Clad Hills Near the Sea

In a grave at Allaire, N. J., on the summit of a small knoll—a spot he loved—from which the broad tree-clustered acres roll away toward the sea, Arthur Brisbane was laid for his long final rest. His funeral services, first in St. Bartholomew's Church in New York, then in the hills of Jersey, were marked by simplicity, as he wished. Photo shows members of his family, close friends and business associates at the grave.

It was their way of praising him as a "swell guy." Said one of Charles' best friends, Howard Schmidt, 11:

"Gee, Chuck is a swell guy! He's a brave kid. I wish there was something we could do to help. He won't be scared. He's a brave kid, but I wish some of us were with him. It is sure awful having a man carry him off like that."

Others told how he could do more "stunts" than any of them.

"He liked to be with his sister, Muriel," Robert Longstreth, 11, recalled. "Most boys don't, but Chuck—he thought a lot of his sister. She was most feel bad. Everybody liked Chuck."

David Somerville, 10, another friend, said he and Charles had "who stood because 'Chuck' wasn't with them."

"We all figured on having some fun this vacation," he added soberly.

'Laughing Victim' Growing Weaker

Spartanburg, S. C., Dec. 29—Seventeen-year-old Margaret Davis, victim of an insane laughing spell leading to herself for three days, was growing weaker today.

The girl's mother, Mrs. Belle Davis, said the girl still laughed occasionally, but was not laughing under the influence of sedatives.

Mrs. Davis said her daughter began repeating "chocolate cherries, chocolate cherries" over and over to herself, but the time she gave her box of chocolate cherries she refused to eat them.

Harvard Ready For Swim Wins

A new deal in Harvard swimming should be forthcoming this season with the return of an almost complete championship squad to action.

Headed by the redoubtable Charlie Hunter, member of the last Crimson winning team, and bolstered by the return of such stellar performers as Dick Furbush and Al Greenleaf, diving stars, and Charlie Colleary and Wib McKay, in the dashes the Crimson looks forward to its best aquatic season in years.

Eleven Vacancies In Girls' Camp

Eleven counselor still remain for Massachusetts girls in the quota to attend the National Youth Administration's three-month camp for girls near Providence, according to an announcement by State Director Edward L. Casey.

Fourteen girls have already been found eligible to go to the camp, which opens January 4.

when the man left. There is an absolute stalemate. I just feel helpless."

Dr. Mattson granted an interview after returning from an unexplained night automobile trip. He left and returned alone, while other members of the family remained in the home.

SMALL BOY ASLEEP

He said he had not inserted any advertisements in Seattle newspapers. A Tacoma police official declared such an advertisement was ordered by the kidnaper in the ransom note he left as he fled from the Mattson living room with Charles in his arms. The notice in the want ad columns was to lead to negotiations for payment of the demanded ransom, the official said.

Rumors arose in half a dozen places.

At Portland, Ore., Dan Harrison, 37, told police a man about 25 years old, dressed in overalls, a blue blazer and a dark cap, ordered him away from a tan sedan as a small boy slept on the back seat. The man issued him directions to the Canadian River highway, Harrison said, and then ordered him to "beat it."

"I haven't placed any ad," Mattson told interviewers. "I won't do so until that man tells me to."

Asked if "that man" was a Department of Justice agent, the doctor smiled.

ALL CLUES FADE

"I don't know what paper the ad will be in when it does appear," he added. "You see, I'm working with the authorities."

He earlier had asserted "as a physician, I feel it my duty to follow the advice of those who know more about this game than I do."

William Mattson, 16-year-old brother of the sobbing Charles, opened the front door from time to time to look at the crowd of newspapermen and curious onlookers on the street.

Friends of the family went in and out of the house, usually holding hands over their faces.

Once a servant brought Charles' lonesome cocker spaniel puppy to the dooryard and allowed him to be photographed.

First clues faded rapidly. Captain Harry Snider of the Washington State patrol conceded without explanation a "pick up" order issued yesterday for a 1935 sedan whose driver was assertedly wanted for questioning.

He said the order was issued "by mistake."

PLEDGE G-MEN AID

Reports of a second automobile stolen half an hour before the abduction might also have been used by the kidnaper, were not verified in Washington. D. C. J. Edgar Hoover pledged the "full co-operation" of the Department of Justice in solving the Tacoma disappearance.

Hoover declined to say whether he would come to Tacoma to take personal charge of the case. Other sources indicated he probably would not. A Tacoma report said an agent by the name of Connolly who was here on the George Weyerhaeuser kidnaping was expected to take charge of the Mattson case soon.

That abduction in 1935, ending with release of the victim unharmed after payment of $200,000 was the last major one in the nation until Sunday.

BOY'S KIDNAPER "LIKE HAUPTMANN"

PARALLEL SEEN IN CRIMES

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 29 (AP)—Striking parallels in the methods of modern American kidnapers were seen today in the abduction of Charles Mattson, 10, and other famous "snatches" since the world-shocking kidnaping and murder of the son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, March 1, 1932.

The Mattson kidnaper entered through a French door of the boy's $50,000 home and left the same way carrying the child.

Bruno Richard Hauptmann was convicted of having entered a second floor window of the Lindbergh mansion, seizing the child, and descending on a rickety ladder. Both homes were isolated, the Mattson residence in the center of a large park, Lindbergh in the lonely Sourland mountains of New Jersey.

RICH RANSOM PAID

Crude ransom notes demanded $70,000 from Weyerhaeuser, $200,000 from Weyerhaeuser's father, and now $25,000 from Dr. W. W. Mattson.

Lindbergh paid $50,000, and his son was found dead. Weyerhaeuser paid $200,000 and his son was returned alive. Negotiations in both cases were carried on privately.

In the same manner Berry V. Sloh of Louisville, Ky., bought the safe return of his wife, kidnaped from her home in 1934, for $50,000. The father of Mary Agnes McEvoy in Kansas City in 1933 obtained her return after a one-day abduction for $30,000. E. G. Bremer, St. Paul, Minn., bank president, was released early in 1934 after 22 days in captivity on payment of $200,000, and William Hamm, St. Paul brewer, bought his freedom for a large, undisclosed sum a short time earlier.

BIG McMATH RANSOM

The kidnapers of Margaret McMath, who abducted her from her schoolroom in Hyrwichport, Mass., in 1933, received $40,000 for her safe conduct home.

August Luer, wealthy Alton, Ill., banker, was turned loose after five days in a dungeon in 1922, and in the same year kidnapers of John J. O'Connell, Jr., of Albany, N. Y., accepted $40,000 in lieu of their original demand of $250,000.

Relatives of Charles F. Urschel, wealthy Oklahoma City oil operator, who was kidnaped in July, 1933, predicted no deal privately with his abductors. He was released.

The distraught father of little Dorothy Ann Dietelhurst, 6, came to New York in November, 1934, from Nashville, Tenn., to negotiate with suspected kidnapers. While in New York he was told his child had been found in a shallow grave in Nashville.

The Mattson kidnaper left instructions for a contact through a newspaper advertisement. Dr. John F. "Jafsie" Condon became ransom payoff man for Lindbergh through such a device; ransom bills were demanded in specified denominations; police investigations turned to the underfront after exhausting possibilities of wooded areas near the home.

Kidnaper Called 'New Enemy I'

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—The nation had a new "Public Enemy No. 1" today—the kidnaper of 10-year-old Charles Mattson.

Besides the bearded, shabbily-dressed stranger who abducted the Mattson boy Sunday night from his Tacoma, Washington, home, only one person facing charges of violating federal kidnap laws is at large.

He is Marie Vandenbosh, slight, red-haired youth, still sought for the kidnaping Nov. 11 of William A. Turnbull, New Jersey state trooper. Harry Brunette, captured after a gun battle in New York, was convicted of participation in the abduction.

The Mattson case is the only unsolved kidnaping in the Department of Justice files, giving rise to the unofficial "public enemy" ranking for the perpetrator.

Somerville Adds To Fire Force

Somerville's fire department today has lieutenants and six privates rather today. Increase in the force was ordered by Mayor Knox to further its efficiency.

The new lieutenants are William H. Kennelly of Berkeley street and John V. Sloane of Moreland street.

CURLEY READY TO REPLACE TWO JUDGES

be presented to the incoming Congress.

One of the two district judges, Frederick A. Fisher of Lowell, has been "invited" to appear personally and submit to examination.

Governor Curley has condemned the Lowell judge for sentencing three girls to jail for stealing a bottle of milk.

More recently his ire was aroused again when the 75-year-old judge sentenced a woman to a year in jail for a first offense for drunkenness.

This woman was among 26 prisoners given Christmas pardons.

ACTION AWAITED

Action is also expected on the suggested resignation of Judge William F. Bacon of the Newton court.

The governor several days ago conferred with the judge's physician, and at the conclusion of the conference stated that it would be in the interest of the judge to retire on a three-fourth's salary pension.

A final determination on Judge Bacon's status is expected to be forthcoming today.

Under pressure from the executive office, Judge Elisha M. Stevens of the Lynn district court has resigned. The vacancy for this special judgeship is expected to be filled today.

Under the constitution, all nominations for judges must lay over a week before the council can confirm them.

Since the governor goes out of office a week from next Thursday, quick disposition must be taken if the changes are to be made effective under the present administration.

CHANCE FOR GALLAGHER

In the event that Judge Bacon goes on the retired list, the governor, it was understood, intended to elevate James P. Gallagher, present clerk of the court, to Bacon's place and then place Robert Gallagher, one of his assistant secretaries, as clerk.

As the counsel met today however, a strong report was in circulation that a drive was on to have the governor name Daniel H. Coakley, Jr., son of the councillor, as clerk.

What disposition is to be made of Gallagher, the assistant secretary, by the governor if he agrees to the proposal was not disclosed.

Coakley, Jr., is a member of the incoming House of Representatives, and for a time was connected with the attorney-general's office.

An attempt will also be made at today's session, it is believed, to break the deadlock that exists over the appointment by the governor of Dr. John J. Deary, of Lawrence, as medical examiner of the fifth Essex district.

Governor Curley, backed by Mayor Griffin and other substantial support from Lawrence, is insisted that the council confirm Dr. Deary, who is chairman of the Lawrence Democratic city committee.

COMPLICATED SITUATION

Lieutenant Governor Joseph L. Hurley is standing fast for a candidate of his own and has the support of Councillors Brennan and Coakley, it is understood.

To add to the complications, the lieutenant governor is regarded as a candidate for appointment as chairman of the public utilities commission, a place to which the governor has submitted the name of Arthur D. Webber, member of the tax appeals board.

Councillors Brennan and Hennessey, in additions, are desirous of having appointed to the tax appeals board, if the lieutenant governor gets the utilities post, Webber will stay on the tax appeals board.

NEW RED FIGHT MAPPED BY M'CORMACK

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—Rep. McCormack (D., Mass.) decided today to "prosecute vigorously" his legislation making it a crime to advocate the overthrow of the government by force or violence.

"It is aimed," he said, "at nobody but the Communists."

McCormack's anti-sedition bill stirred up debate in the last congress over freedom of speech and of the press. It grew out of investigations by a special House committee on un-American activities, which he headed.

Asserting he would reintroduce the bill, McCormack added:

"No American can oppose a bill of this character. It has always been amazing to me that those who advocate the overthrow of our government by force and violence have opportunity to go to Russia and live there, but none of them wants to do so."

McCormack contends the free press and speech provisions of the constitution do not sanction advocacy of upsetting the government.

"That is not freedom of speech or of the press," he said. "It is an abuse of those great constitutional rights. Where circumstances warrant it, it is the duty of the Congress to pass appropriate legislation controlling and regulating such abuses."

Harvard's Palache Named Geology Society Head

Professor Charles Palache of Harvard was elected president of the Geological Society of America, as that organization opened its 49th annual convention at Cincinnati.

At the same time the Mineralogical Society of America, acting in joint convention with the geologists, elected Dr. Norman L. Bowen of the geophysical laboratory in Washington, D. C., as president.

Dr. Palache succeeds Dr. W. C. Mendenhall, chief of the United States Geological Survey, while Dr. Bowen succeeds Professor William S. Bayley of the University of Illinois.

Nineteen geologists were selected as fellows of the Geological Society, one of them a woman, Dr. Alice Evelyn Wilson of the Geological Survey of Canada, Ottawa.

SHEEHAN SQUAD NABS 2 IN RAID

While five "customers" pounded on the door trying to get in to place their daily number, members of Captain James T. Sheehan's anti-vice squad today smashed the barricaded door of an alleged numbers pool headquarters at Tremont street, South End, and arrested two men.

Booked at police headquarters on charges of selling up a lottery were Louis Gold, 48, of Pond street, Dorchester, and Lawrence Cohen, 22, of Bacon street, Dorchester.

Captain Sheehan said he had been informed the place had been in operation for eight years.

Antonia Docks, Lone Girl Debarks

For the first time in years the Cunard liner Antonia made port in Boston today, disembarking one lone passenger at the East Boston docks.

The passenger was Miss Mary McGuinness, formerly Portadown, who had spent the last five years in the ancient Irish town of Drogheda in County Meath.

Miss McGuinness has returned to make her home with a cousin, Mrs. Katherine Keniley, in Mount avenue, Quincy.

The Antonia carried 75 other passengers from Cobh, Ireland, and a consignment of 208 canaries and eight pigeons. The birds proved themselves good sailors on the crossing from Liverpool and Cobh, only one canary dying en route.

Robbins Company Increases Wages

General increases in salary and a substantial bonus as well have been announced for the 600 employes of the George B. Robbins Disinfectant Company of Boston by President George B. Robbins.

President Robbins also announces that after enjoying the best year in 70 years, the company would open several new branch offices in charge of William J. Healey, sales director.

Acute

Pauls Valley, Okla., Dec. 29 (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Emsy Jackson, a Negro couple, are puzzling over a nickname for their daughter born Christmas Day.

They already have nicknames for their two sons, Tonsy and Minnie. But she can't decide on a shortened form of their infant daughter's name. Her full name is Appendicitis. The boys are Tonsilitis and Meningitis.

CANYON TOMB GIVES UP 12 AIR DEAD

Los Angeles, Dec. 29 (INS)—One of man's earliest forms of transportation — pack horses — was pressed into the grim mission today of carrying 12 mangled bodies from the wreckage of a huge ultra-modern United Air Lines plane to the nearest highway.

Hampered by darkness and a cloudburst, bodies were placed on the horses and slowly taken through unbelievably wild country to the waiting ambulances.

The twin-motored transport, which disappeared Sunday night en route from San Francisco to Los Angeles, was found in a ravine in Rice Canyon, below a ridge where its wings had been torn off as it crashed with a terrific impact.

Pilot Edwin W. Blom of Burbank, his radio apparently out of order, was believed to have nosed down the plane for the steep descent from the Tehachapi mountains into the San Fernando valley, where the Union Air terminal is located, when the big liner crashed into the ridge.

All of the 12 persons on the ship, nine passengers and three crew members, were killed instantly. Their bodies lay in a tangled, horribly mutilated mass in the forward end, where the impact of the disaster had tossed them.

Victims of the crash, in addition to Blom, were:

Co-pilot Robert McLean, Oakland; Stewardess Yvonne Tracy, Oakland; Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Ford, Jr., San Marino, Cal.; Mrs. Warren Newton, Los Angeles; Frank Teague, St. Los Angeles, artist.

Paul O. Hare, 36 Moreland; Miss Evelyn Valaure, 25, stenographer, Los Angeles; Alex N. Novak, 25, El Centro, Cal.; John Korz, 27, El Centro; A. L. Marwood, Los Angeles.

The wings, several hundred feet apart, were near the top of a ridge while below, its cigar-shaped hulk twisted around a giant tree that stopped its fall far the tomb of the air travelers.

Enough

Suffolk, Va., Dec. 29 (INS)—"We already have eight children and that's quite enough," Dr. L. E. Rawls told the welfare department today in asking they take custody of a two-year-old baby who was left on his doorstep yesterday.

Judges of Inaugural Contest

DR. WILLIAM P. RYAN MRS. JAMES CUNNINGHAM GRAY JAMES REARDON PROF. MOODY ARCHIE R. GIROUX

3 Chelsea Youths Seized for Holdup

Three Chelsea youths were arrested at gunpoint today, charged with armed robbery of a Market square, West Lynn, rum-selling room.

Police said the trio confessed to staging the cold holdup, which netted several hundred dollars, in Chelsea.

From their names, they took John A. Bagley, 21, of Washington avenue, Chelsea, and Royal H. Wood, 20, of Lash street, Chelsea.

The three prisoners were first taken to Chelsea police headquarters for questioning, then were turned over to Lynn police, who locked them up on armed robbery charges.

In Lynn Court each of the three was held in $5000 for the grand jury by Judge Philip Kiely.

WOMAN ON YULE VISIT WELLESLEY SUICIDE

Mrs. Harriet Porter Travers, 55, who was found dead late last night at the Wellesley home of her son-in-law, Carl J. Swenson, vice-president of the Merchants National Bank of Boston, was pronounced a suicide today by Medical Examiner Otho L. Schofield.

Mrs. Travers, a resident of Nashua, N. H., shot herself in the head with Swenson's 38 calibre revolver, in the house on Old Town road, Dr. Schofield said.

A Christmas guest at the home, she complained of neuralgic pains from which she had been a sufferer for a long time, and told her daughter she would retire. Instead, she got the gun from a dresser drawer in the Swensons' bedroom and killed herself.

Her daughter found her dead. The Swenson children, for whom Mrs. Travers had brought Christmas gifts, were not told that their grandmother was dead. The body was taken to Nashua by Irving John Traver, her second husband, this afternoon. He had been called from Nashua last night.

Roosevelt Junior Shows Gain

Although he has cancelled plans to attend a New Year party with his fiancee Miss Ethel du Pont, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., son of the President, was hopeful today that he would be able to end his hospital stay within a few days.

Tests taken during the greater part of the day indicated the patient was convalescing satisfactorily after his operation for sinus trouble at Phillips House, Massachusetts General Hospital, according to his physician, Dr. George Loring Tobey.

If the youth's condition continues to improve, it is probable that other visitors will be allowed to see him. This far only his mother and his fiancee have been visitors.

Bargain Day

Bowling Green, O., Dec. 29 (AP)—Probate Judge B. O. Bistline hung out a "Business as Usual" sign Saturday while other Wood county offices were closed.

Then he set a record for activity. He issued 45 marriage licenses to Michigan and Ohio couples, a new top for a single day.

Dunn Takes Over New School Post

10,000 PUPILS IN INAUGURAL CONTEST

Day by day the date approaches on which 20 Massachusetts high school students—10 boys and 10 girls—will be named as guests at Presidents Roosevelt's inauguration in January.

The five distinguished judges of the Roosevelt Inauguration Tour Competition are now poring over the mass of manuscripts submitted by more than 10,000 high school pupils.

The excellence of the answers and the knowledge of American history shown by the contestants has slowed the work of the judges considerably, but within the next few days they are expected to eliminate all but the 20 winners.

Watch the Boston Evening American day by day for the announcement which may say that you are one of the fortunate 20 pupils who will journey to Washington to witness one of the great events in the nation's history.

LIST CUT TO 500

At their meeting yesterday the judges of the competition revealed that they had cut the list of manuscripts submitted down to 500 and from this total will come the 20 winners.

The judges, who expected to be able to announce the winners early this week, explained that the high caliber of all the manuscripts submitted made their task increasingly difficult.

Of course only 20 winners can be chosen, but the task will try the judges to the utmost, for even those who fail have proven their knowledge of history and their ability to express their knowledge in written words.

Some who have already fallen by the wayside failed because they forgot the rule which required that each answer must be limited to 100 words or less.

Many answered the questions excellently, but used more than the maximum number of words to do so and for that reason were eliminated.

DIFFICULT TO CHOOSE

Of those remaining, however, the judges were agreed, the answers are excellent and the ultimate choice will be a difficult one.

The judges of the competition are Commissioner of Education James G. Reardon, Professor Robert Earl Moody, Mrs. Cunningham Gray, Dr. William P. Ryan, head of the State Department, American Legion, and Archie R. Giroux, member of the Lexington Board of Selectmen.

Their decision will be ready soon. Maybe YOU will be one of the fortunate ones who will be chosen for the historic trip.

Be sure to follow the contest closely. Watch each day in the Boston Evening American for the announcement of the winners.

Name's Handy For Gandhi

If you saw the name "Mohandas K. Gandhi" on the hotel register you'd probably say to yourself:

"A travelling salesman, I bet. Or a Turkish rug merchant."

If you added to it and made it "Mahatma Mohandas K. Gandhi," it would look kind of familiar, but still a little puzzling.

So, if you deleted the "Mohandas K." and made it plain "Mahatma Gandhi," well, you'd be pretty dumb if you didn't know then who was stopping there.

For "Mohandas" is the white-robed Mahatma's first name, and very few people know it.

Dental Convention Opens at Statler

The 29th annual convention of the Alpha Omega Dental Fraternity, among the largest in the country, opened today at the Hotel Statler under direction of Supreme-Marshal Dr. Louis Dsnovitch of Norwood.

Other officers include Dr. Jack Glazin, supreme issuer; Dr. Moyer Eggert, supreme council representative, and chairmen of committees Drs. Herbert J. Margolis, Hyman Schwartz, I. D. Davis, Edward I. Silver, George Fink, Nathan Cohen, A. M. Flaxbiner, Murray Soffer, Max Jacobs, Henry Swanbe, Leonard Green and B. Rosen.

Wounded Youth Held for Holdup

Worcester, Dec. 29—Borrowing an automatic pistol from a friend, Rupert Mondor, 21, of Auburn, set out to commit a series of robberies at filling stations, according to testimony in court here today.

Mondor, wounded last Monday in a gun duel with a 60-year-old attendant at a local gas station, appeared in court on crutches and pleaded guilty to a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon on Charles Burgnat, who was also wounded, and armed robbery of an Auburn filling station. He was held in $10,000 for the grand jury.

BRITAIN AWARDS $800,000 YEAR TO EDWARD

By ALFRED TYRNAUER

Enzesfeld, Austria, Dec. 29 (US)—Negotiations with the British government over the financial status of Edward, Duke of Windsor, have reached a final settlement, and the former king is expected to receive about $800,000 a year, it was reported authoritatively.

This was revealed after the duke lunched with Sir Walford Selby, British minister to Austria, at the legation in nearby Vienna.

EDWARD GETS TERMS

It was understood the minister gave Edward mail from London containing terms of the settlement.

Leaving the legation, Edward went to the Central Baths of Vienna, where he had a steam bath and a massage.

A girl at the buffet had recognized the former king and, as he left, she gave him a bunch of red roses.

The gallant duke stopped and spoke to the girl in German. He said:

"I call this very attentive service. You are certainly a charming girl."

PHONES MRS. SIMPSON

The self-exiled duke then went shopping. He bought a 10-pound box of Viennese candy for Mrs. Wallis Simpson, the American woman for whom he renounced his throne, and some new skiing equipment for himself.

Later, he had tea at the Hotel Bristol, where he used to stay on his former visits to Vienna.

Shortly afterward he returned to Enzesfeld, where he is the guest of Baron and Baroness De Rothschild.

Still later the duke telephoned Cannes, France, and talked to Mrs. Simpson for nearly an hour.

Right Color

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—Miss Mabel Mather, a children's nurse, sought to mail a letter in a red box and then was accused of turning in a false alarm.

She pleaded guilty and received a suspended sentence when she explained to the court she passed most of her life in England and there, she said, the mail boxes are red.

Berlin Sees Move Aiding Nazi Plans

American neutrality act is inapplicable.

"It can be said even now that through delivery of such war material from the United States the international situation and the activity of the international non-intervention committee may easily be jeopardized."

This American angle, it was understood, will be included in the dossier Chancellor Hitler is making up for reply to the Anglo-French Christmas request that Germany halt all arms and "volunteer" shipments to Spain.

It may even influence Der Fuehrer to make the big point of his reply the contention there is no use agreeing to get out of Spain if the back door is left open for others to supply arms to the Loyalists. The German government's sympathies are with the Rebels.

It was pointed out that once again the United States faces the picture of a possible European war through the medium of the high seas.

Report 25 Soviet Subs Headed for Spain

London, Dec. 29 (US)—Disturbing reports to the effect Soviet Russia has dispatched a fleet of 25 submarines to Spanish waters has reached London after it was disclosed Britain and France will propose a six-power naval blockade of Spain's coastline to prevent a European war.

The departure of a Russian submarine fleet for Spanish waters was reported in a dispatch from Warsaw to the London Daily Mirror, which declared information regarding this sensational move had been obtained on "good authority."

This report stirred uneasiness in diplomatic circles as British and French statesmen prepared to present to the international non-intervention committee Thursday the proposal that all Spanish ports be blockaded by the naval of Britain, France, Russia, Germany, Italy and Portugal.

Nazi Ships May Search All Bilboa-Bound Craft

Berlin, Dec. 29 (AP)—The curt demand of a German cruiser and a threat to halt and search the ships of any nation heading for Bilbao won freedom today for the interned German freighter Palos.

The Palos, sequestered by Basque authorities at Bilbao last week, was liberated "upon demand of the cruiser Koenigsberg," an official announcement said, but part of her cargo and one unidentified Spanish passenger were retained by the Basques.

Nazi naval might immediately was pressed toward the Bay of Biscay to free the Spaniard and the rest of the cargo.

The cruiser Koeln and one torpedo boat, rushed toward Spain to protect German shipping soon after the Palos was captured, were due in the bay today.

Commanders of both the Koenigsberg and the Koeln may, within their own discretion, search any merchantman of any nation which is heading for Bilbao.

Reports through France, however, indicated the Koenigsberg commander went ashore at Bilbao to demand the release of the Palos.

The Hamburg offices of the Portugese - Oldenburg Shipping Company, owners of the Palos, declared emphatically there was no contraband on the vessel.

They said the ship would go first to Portugal and then to Morocco, from Bilbao.

Neutrality Act Change Sought in Congress

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—Congressional demands for swift amendment of the neutrality act were prompted today by a State Department grant of licenses to export $2,777,000 of second-hand airplanes and engines to the Madrid government.

Senator Duffy (D., Wis.), member of the Senate foreign relations committee, forecast action immediately after Congress convenes Tuesday to "plug the loophole" which compels the licensing of arms shipments for use in civil conflicts.

It was stated officially that no other American dealers in war implements had sought to follow the lead of Robert Cuse, of Jersey City, in asking upon his right under the neutrality law to make such shipments. Cuse is president of the Vimalert Company, Ltd., of Jersey City, N. J.

The present neutrality act requiring May 1 forbids arms sales to belligerent "foreign powers," but not to factions in a civil war.

Nazi Delay in Replying Stirs French Officials

Paris, Dec. 29 (AP)—Watchful speculation of the interned German freighter Palos soothed an explosive angle of the Spanish war today, but French officials expressing increased concern over Nazi delay in replying to France-British pressure for measures to stop volunteer fighters from going to Spain.

Yvon Delbos, the French foreign minister, delivered a detailed report of the volunteer situation to the council of ministers.

Persons in authority said they were increasingly anxious about the German reluctance to take a definite stand on that issue.

Reds Start New Drive At Five Sectors

Madrid, Dec. 29 (UNS)—Unleashing simultaneous offensives on five widely separated fronts, Loyalist armies today assaulted rebel strongholds in a series of furious 9th day blows.

Rebel sources claimed every onslaught was beaten back with disastrous results to the Loyalists. From conflicting claims it seemed government forces have begun a drive to crush Franco's beginning before he receives further foreign help.

Hitler Spars for Time In Spanish Crisis

By The Associated Press

Berlin, Dec. 29—Adolf Hitler was described today by diplomatic circles as playing for time in the Spanish crisis, determined to give insurgent Fascists another chance to capture Madrid before he promises Europe to withdraw aid.

Diplomats most concerned in the latest Franco-British demand for non-intervention have concluded they must wait a considerable time for Hitler's answer.

Hitler's main play was said now to be for time in which to consult with Premier Mussolini of Italy before he decides to halt volunteer aid to Franco, or grant his request for more men.

California Snow Is Hollywood Hail

Los Angeles, Dec. 29 (AP)—Snow in Death Valley, but in Hollywood climaxed the weather movie crazy show in California before a wreck-and storm began clearing today.

Property damage was estimated at $500,000.

CUSE MYSTERY MAN IN PLANE SALE CRISIS

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 29 (UNS)—Robert Cuse, man-of-mystery, whose successful application for a State Department license to ship airplanes abroad has caused a furore in European chancelleries, today denied that the ships would be transformed into fighting craft.

In a formal statement issued through an intermediary who carefully cloaked his own identity, Cuse failed to state whether or not the planes would be sent to Spain, but made a non-committal reference to the desirability of commerce "with countries that are not at war."

MYSTERY MAN

The statement was given out at the office o fthe Vimalert Company, reputedly headed by Cuse, by a man who refused to identify himself. He said, however, that he was acting for Cuse, who, telephoning from a point outside Bayonne, had dictated the statement to a stenographer.

He declined to state where Cuse could be reached.

Text of the statement follows:

"I wish to make it clear at the outset that the airplanes for which my company has secured a license are commercial planes that are neither designed, built, or equipped for conversion into fighting planes.

"As stated in the newspapers, the planes have been used by private owners throughout the country for a considerable length of time. The replacement of these planes and engines, the overhauling of the engines and the manufacturing of engine spare parts will provide employment for approximately 1500 men for a period of one year.

"My company is engaged in the manufacturing of engines and parts and had dealings with foreign countries in its usual course of trade for 12 years. In my opinion, during the present lack of employment and vast expenditure for public money for relief, an opportunity of securing work through trade with countries that are not at war should not be passed over.

LICENSE LEGAL

"The fact remains that my company has purchased commercial airplanes for shipment to a country with which we are not at war, on the strength of and in compliance with the existing laws of our country, and th eliscense for their export was granted accordingly."

The Vimalert plant consists of two brick buildings. Employes refused to state to reporters whether airplanes and parts were inside the structure.

Dedham Wife, Man Arrested in Maine

Arrested at Lewiston, Me., Miss E. Maynard, 23, of Greenhood street, and Mrs. Thelma Chamberlin, 24, of Stafford street, both of Dedham, were brought back today by Police Chief John F. Cahill of Dedham.

Maynard is charged with breaking into automobiles and stealing Christmas packages and Mrs. Chamberlain is accused of deserting three minor children.

CHIEF TAKES A SHOT

First in 12 Years, Suspended

Kingsville, Ont., Dec. 29 (UNS)—After firing his revolver for what he said was the first time in 12 years, Police Chief Cecil J. Babcock today was under suspension for ten days for careless use of firearms.

The chief was found guilty by the town council of firing four shots at boys on Christmas Eve as they fled in a car after ringing the town fire bell. He admitted this, but said he only fired to scare the boys and without aiming at them. One of the shots, however, pierced the windshield of the car.

"It's the first time I have fired a shot from my revolver in 12 years," Babcock told the council.

Racket Suspect In 6-Story Plunge

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—Max Pincus, 56, awaiting trial on indictments found on the investigation by Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey into restaurant rackets today fell six floors to his death from a Bronx apartment house.

First U. S. Woman War Doctor Dies

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—Dr. Caroline Sanford Finley, 61, the first woman physician to go to France during the World War to the hospitals established by the National American Woman Suffrage Association, died of a heart attack last night at her home.

Nurse Shortage With Chicago Flu

Chicago, Dec. 29 (AP)—More pneumonia and influenza cases than at any time since 1918, said President Herman N. Bundesen of the board of health, caused a shortage today of trained nurses and oxygen tents in Chicago.

Chicago Chalks Up New Bridal Mark

Chicago, Dec. 29 (AP)—History was made at the Chicago marriage license bureau today when Chief Clerk Bill Summerfield totaled up the number of 1936 marriage and announced the result as 42,252, with three days to go.

The old high was 41,159 in 1923.

Paris Has 3-Hour Grocery Strike

Paris, Dec. 29 (UNS)—A "surprise strike" by grocery store and slaughter house workers was called off as suddenly as it began today, pending negotiations.

It was stated discussions toward a settlement will be resumed January 6 after which Minister of the Interior Dormoy, acting as arbitrator, will render a decision January 15. The strike, which lasted about three hours, closed Paris' most important grocery stores and affected about 10,000 employes.

6 Vehicles Crash, 3 Killed, 10 Hurt

Havre de Grace, Md., Dec. 29 (UNS)—Three men were killed, ten others injured and six autos and trucks smashed in a three-way on the Belaty road just north of the Gunpowder river bridge.

The accident occurred when a driver of a truck laden with whiskey attempted to pass two other trucks ahead of him.

Trolley Hits Auto, Brothers Hurt

Robert and Emmett Goulde, brothers, of Hampshire street, Cambridge, were in Cambridge City Hospital today with injuries they received when the car in which they were riding collided with a street car at the Mt. Auburn street entrance to Harvard Square tunnel and overturned.

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

GEORGE HOLLAND

HUMAN INTEREST: In a career punctuated by spectacular successes along the Broadway sector, a comedian has found his greatest hit in an expensive and smart musical show which opened Christmas night . . . at the Winter Garden . . . The show is one which began here, "The Show Is On," and the comedian, of course, is Bert Lahr . . . In Boston, on Christmas night, another lavish musical opened at the Shubert Theater . . . In the chorus was a girl named Mildred Shroeder . . . To give her her legal name she is Mildred Shroeder Robinson, wife of Joseph S. Robinson, the New York lawyer who fathered the Anti-Alienation Suit Law . . . Six weeks ago, Attorney Robinson petitioned the New York Supreme Court for an injunction to prevent Lahr from supporting his (Robinson's) wife . . . If he had wished, the attorney couldn't sue the comedian for alienation of affections because of the law he had sponsored . . .

After his suit for an injunction, Attorney Robinson was quoted as saying he sought no money from Lahr, but desired an annulment of his marriage . . . So with proceedings of one sort or another pending in the courts, with the Lahr star higher in its firmament than ever before, the girl in the case is winning a living of her own in a chorus-line of a Boston theater . . .

In tails and top-hat, a handsome young actor sat through the premiere performance of "Jane Eyre" at the Colonial Theater last night while another actor played the part that had been his until Saturday night . . . Stephen Appleby was the visiting actor . . . After two "break-in" performances at New Haven, Appleby was given his notice . . . The actor who succeeded him, with only two days' rehearsal, was unfortunate enough last night to be the only member of the cast who "blew up" in his lines . . . He was "carried" through the scene by the alert prompting of Barbara O'Neil, and the composure of Katharine Hepburn . . . This actor, John Williams, made amends later in the play by his able handling of a very badly written scene, which sounded less bad under his ministrations that it might have.

But the young man "out front," Stephen Appleby, a good actor, too, left the theater with his shirt front and collar wilted . . . He was near tears shaking with nervousness and sympathy when the lines he had rehearsed and memorized through four long weeks failed to come to the mind of his successor.

Odds Are Lessening:

Sergeant Bill McCarthy, among other investigating officers of the police, is convinced that the expression "not a Chinaman's chance" is an exaggeration . . . A Chinaman-lefty was stopped for speeding by the Massachusetts avenue police block . . . Sergeant McCarthy nodded his head sadly as he wrote down the particulars of the accident . . . Then he went to City Hospital to complete his story for the blotter, and noticed that the victim of the accident, who was groaning his last . . . He found Wong smiling, suffering from cuts of the arm, bruises of the face . . .

Once Over Lightly:

All the down town spots will hold the curfew two hours at least New Year's Eve . . . Genevieve Sawyer, formerly of the Lenox Blue Train, was at Cocoanut Grove last night, in town for a night before joining Mal Hallet's band at the Commodore in New York . . . Dolly Stark, the National League umpire, who resigned in a salary tiff, was around town with his first booster, Bill Grimes, of this paper's sporting staff . . . The present answer to those rumors that Dolly would succeed Fred Hoey as broadcaster of the ball-game is this: (a) Stark has not been approached; (b) he likes and admires Hoey; (c) propositions in the Stark direction must name about three times the figure the Boston broadcasting job pays; (d) Philadelphia, where Dolly broke in last year as a broadcaster, doesn't wish to let him go . . .

Ann Corio, who succeeded, is also in town . . . If, and the haunting Roberta March of Brooklyn dancing in the Martinez Rhumba Band at the Mayfair last night . . . As did Xavier Cugat, of the Metropolitan's current show . . . "Hitch's Delight" will play Boston the second half of February . . . But the theater has not been decided . . . The show is "permitted in" (which means provisional list subject to change) at the Colonial for two weeks, or longer . . . But it may go to the Opera House for one week, or two . . .

Plenty of Melody and Love on Screen

BUDDY EBSEN FRANCES LANGFORD

Buddy Ebsen and Frances Langford play featured roles in "Born to Dance," the new film starring Eleanor Powell which opens at Loew's State and Orpheum on Thursday.

Seven song and dance numbers, including four written especially for Eleanor Powell, are highlights of the film.

Midnight Shows To Greet '37

New Year's Eve will usher in the theatrical season's biggest midnight show schedule, tickets for which are now on sale at most of the theaters.

Keith's Memorial will start its New Year's Eve celebration with a 5 p. m. premiere, Thursday, of the new Lily Pons musical film, "That Girl from Paris," in which the petite prima donna has Gene Raymond and Jack Oakie as leading men. This new feature will be shown continuously through eight and until early Friday morning. The regular engagement will open Friday.

* * *

The Met will have a special roadshow presentation, for Thursday only, of "One in a Million," in which Sonja Henie, the ballerina on skates, makes her film debut, with Adolphe Menjou, Jean Hersholt, Ned Sparks, the Ritz Brothers and Don Ameche supporting her. The stage show will feature Mara May, the four Yacht Club Boys, the Singing Collegians, Rafael Hoguet, a platoon of dancing girls and other acts.

The Paramount and Fenway will present a special midnight bill for this performance only including the world premiere of "Champagne Waltz," spectacular musical film starring Gladys Swarthout, with Fred MacMurray and Jack Oakie, and a comedy romance, "Easy to Take," featuring John Howard, Marsha Hunt and Eugene Pallette.

* * *

"Born to Dance," starring ace dancer Eleanor Powell, tops the State and Orpheum's Thursday midnight screen program, which will be part of a continuous bill opening Thursday morning.

The RKO Boston is featuring Ken Murray with his "Broadway Rhythm Revue," for their New Year's eve midnight bill. This will be a special performance of the stage show opening Thursday morning on the R-K-O stage.

Bobbie Yeomans and Sam Hayden head the Old Howard's holiday eve midnight burlesque revue, and the Gayety's midnight stage attraction will be the new Hollywood Revue. Both the Bunday and the Bowdoin announce special New Year's eve midnight screen shows plus novelties.

At the Modern

The two new features now showing at the Modern are "Come and Get It," adaption of Edna Ferber's popular novel, starring Edward Arnold, Frances Farmer and Joel McCrea, and "Hideaway Girl," featuring Martha Raye and Shirley Ross.

Olympia's Films

The Washington Street Olympia's new bill starting today includes "Craig's Wife," with John Boles, Rosalind Russell and Billie Burke, and "Pots Joe," starring the E. Brown. There will be a special gala show New Year's Eve at this theater.

M-G-M's new miracle show of melody, laughter, romance, girls and stars is the kind of show Broadway would charge $6.60 to see! The comedy stars of "Broadway Melody of 1936" and many others go to town in it! And Eleanor Powell dances and sings and romances (with her new sweetheart, James Stewart) in an entertainment you'll want to see all over again!

IT'S BIGGER THAN A '6.60 B'WAY SHOW!

Reinhardt to Produce 'Casino' for Screen

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service.)

Los Angeles, Dec. 29 (US)—Dozens of guesses have been hazarded as to what Max Reinhardt would do next for Warner Brothers since "Danton" was shelved. We can stop guessing now.

"Casino," an original story by Denison Clift, has been bought and Reinhardt commissioned to make it into a screen musical. Expensive word, that! In a month, but this one is really destined to be one of the most preten-tious pictures ever to come out of the Warner studios.

And who do you think will star in it? Edward G. Robinson and Ruby Keeler.

Louella O. Parsons

Pending other Warner players will be added to the cast, but Eddie is to have the big male role, that of an international group. Of course, there's romance and of course there's music and plenty. Sounds like a somewhat different idea for a musical, but I imagine the Reinhardt touch is the thing and the music incidental.

What with double bills the Mark brothers, the Ritz Brothers, and the Yacht Club Boys, were living in a dizzy age. I thought we had our hands full with two sets of maniacs, but now comes the three Diamond brothers to join Universal.

Rufus Lemaire saw them in London and so loved the descriptions they sang and danced with the fervor of the Yacht Club Boys, so as soon as the Ritz brothers and have all the comedy tricks of the far famed Marxes. They'll go into Radio's Mr. Deeds musical, "Mr. Broadway," and you'll have a chance to judge for yourself whether there's an heir to Harpo, Lemaire and Universal claim.

Gertrude Michael, who spent nine months in a New York hospital, is back in Hollywood looking a little wan, a little thin, but feeling herself. She will rest until the last of January, when she goes into "Night Mendel" with Victor McLaglen and Jack Oakie at RKO. Jack has been borrowed from Paramount and Victor from Fox. Each is a member in new under contract to RKO.

Whether the wide, wide world knows it or not, Bing Crosby's Paramount contract was already with the Bing Crosby Corporation, a family group controlling all of Bing's radio and screen activities. When the corporation was recently dissolved, Bing might have had the right to shell out his contract with Para was not and you, or else gone on a strike for more money. He didn't do either.

But when someone asked him what he was going to do about it, he replied: "Nothing. I'm too Smart boy Bing, to realize that these star-studded squabbling affairs done were out for the benefit of the player.

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: The annual Carole Lombard-Clark Gable Christmas gag this year was played on their good friends the Zeppo Marxes. When Marian and Zeppo awoke Christmas morning their whole front lawn had been transformed into a barnyard with bales and bales of hay covering the grass.

Tethered close by was a mangy, decrepit old donkey wearing a holly wreath on his head and another on his tail, with a Christmas card bearing the names of Hollywood's two prize jokesters.

Roland Brown, whose last story, "The Devil Is a Sissy," is one of the MGM hits of the season, has written another, "Gambler's Maxim," which Paramount has bought for George Raft. It is a story of crooked race track operations, but to me, the most interesting news is Roland's marriage.

He's one of the best directors in the business, and producers would jump at the chance of signing him to direct his own stories, if he weren't so temperamental as a Garbo or a Dietrich. Many are the pictures he's started—but the ones he's finished are few and far between.

• • •

A LINE OR TWO: The Donald Ogden Stewarts, who are such bright particular stars of Hollywood's social life, have been abroad for the long, but it's a swell town to know they're headed back here where they will adapt "The Prisoner of Zenda" for David Selznick . . . B. P. Schulberg is back in town, but his brand new wife, Lois Deell, is remaining on in New York for a week or so before coming to the coast.

Eugene Garrick, one of the boys sent out on those mass interviews, and Ben Bard Bush made such a hit, he was tested and signed for a role in the picture starring Miss Deell, it remaining on in New York for a week or so before coming to the coast.

Eugene Garrick, one of the boys sent out on those mass interviews, and Ben Bard Bush made such a hit, he was tested and signed for a role in the picture starring Miss Deell, it remaining on in New York for a week or so before coming to the coast.

. . . Anita Louise has been cast opposite Warner Baxter in "The Countess from Hong Kong," which certainly makes an interesting combination . . . Manuel Reachi is here from Mexico with governmental okay on two stories which Para will produce.

Guest and Fish Same in 3 Days

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Mr. Landon's visit to the White House wasn't long enough for him to "X" his room on a souvenir postcard.

The trip shows the altruism of a pure democracy that will let a man look over something he ain't going to get. The wardrobe of the well-dressed politician must include the cap and gown of the electoral college.

It was but a short visit. And short visits are enjoyed by everybody, including the host. The further inland you go the truer becomes the Persian proverbs of the striking resemblance of a great and a fish after three days.

P. S.—We saw it in the newsreels, which carried all the 18 states.

Guns for 50 Cents

Only 50 cents will be charged persons over 21 years of age to carry revolvers or pistols from police headquarters in 1937 instead of the $2 fee, which has been in force in Boston for many years.

Stray Shots Hit B. & M. Coach

Boys playing with an air gun or 22 calibre rifle were believed responsible today for bullets which shattered two windows of a Boston and Maine Mattapan-bound train near the Phillips Brook section of Swampscott. No one was hurt.

Gayest of New Year's Eves

By MANUEL SHERMAN

Boston's greatest New Year's Eve celebration will usher in 1937.

Gala floor shows are being planned at all night clubs and restaurants with the prospect that every table will be taken hours before the noisy welcome to the New Year.

One of the biggest floor shows ever produced in any Boston night club will be the attraction at the Lido. The popular Chinese and American club has gone to great expense to bring a star cast of Broadway acts to appear for New Year's Eve.

The Gary Sisters, tap dancers, are the high spot of the show. Norma Mitchell, a sensation in her last Boston appearance, is a real unusual high kick dancer. Lita and La Shard, dance team who specialize in the waltz, and Jerry Hoshbro's network vocalists, round out a well-balanced show.

AT THE ESSEX

A party that will hit new heights in holiday entertainment will be staged at The Hotel Essex with the Grill room, the Red Room and the new French Casino all available. Brilliant Chapman and Rotheryn Pope, popular ballroom dance team, who need no introduction to Boston night club visitors, are featured at the Brunswick Casino.

Countess Alabassi is introducing her thrilling cape dance at the Cocoanut Grove, where she is being acclaimed by enthusiastic audiences.

At Dave Sea Grill on Tremont street, Louis Dini, proprietor, has secured the services of a network band and star entertainment.

Hotel Langham will have 20 big acts from New York which will round out one of the biggest affairs ever held at any hotel.

New Year's Eve jollification at Steuben's Vienna Room will be one of the downtown events with Jack Fisher's music as the feature.

At the Westminster Blue Room, Harry Drake thinks the impending celebration will be the best in this hotel's history.

Eddie Levine will present his marvelous floor show of colored entertainers at the Little Harlem. No one could ask for anything better in the way of tapping, trucking or singing than these aces lads and gals have to offer.

H. C. Demeter of the Hotel Minerva has arranged a midnight-to-dawn celebration.

A new swing band, fine food, a great floor show, will be available at the Hotel Imperial.

For Greek and American dishes the Olympia-Athens in Stuart street, maintains its long-established fame.

If you wish for a bottle of champagne along with your dinner you must make your reservations now at the Copley Square Hotel.

Ben Pullo and his fine orchestra are playing at the Tremont Plaza.

At the Crawford House a special New Year's Eve show and the hottest of swing bands is scheduled.

Leisure to Repent

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

On that evening when first he felt physically comfortable, and assured that he would in time be more or less able to go on with things, his father had his dinner brought to him, on a tray beside Keith's bed. That had become his daily custom.

His old face now had a triumphant look, as if his son's recovery were largely due to his insistence, his imposition of will upon that crew of dubious physicians!

Why, the boy would be well as ever shortly, and much more of a man, for losing some of his mother's beauty.

He said: "You're feeling like yourself, Keith. We can talk."

His son nodded, just resisted saying, "Only, we've never been able to talk," and waited.

"Nice amount of publicity you got yourself, and Felicia."

Keith spoke about them: "You are unexpectedly amiable about it."

"Too bad you didn't have a critical illness in your childhood."

"I don't see the connection, Father."

"Simple enough. Never knew I was fond of you until I thought I might lose you. Could have known years sooner, if you'd had scarlet fever or something of that sort."

"Better late than never, I suppose."

"Don't joke, Keith, I'm serious."

His father's dark gaze was fixed on the curtained window.

"Something I should tell you, Keith. I would never have—have lost your mother, if I'd been willing to say I wasn't always right."

Perhaps that was true, Keith thought. Perhaps Stella Mary Sheldie might have endured her life, might even have enjoyed all wealth, and the power implicit behind it if his father had been just a degree less confirmed in his arbitrary.

"I suppose," the older man said in the worried voice his son had ever heard come from between those firm lips, "some one or other told you that old story, about you mother and me."

Keith nodded.

"A musician?" his father said bitterly. "Didn't know how to take care of her. She was always a soft, delicate little thing. I wouldn't have minded so much, if he'd been able to give her things—make her comfortable."

That man with whom Mary Sheldie had run away had given her nothing but death. There was no possible answer. Apparently his father expected none. He went on:

"I treated her badly. While I wouldn't admit that, I treated you badly too, because you were her son. She died. I couldn't bear for her son to die, last bit of her in the world."

He paused. Then he said quietly: "Keith, a man's wife is his own; so I have no reproaches for you. Only, I wish you'd faced it out, gone to the woman's husband. I would have been more—more—"

"We were no out way to her husband," Keith interrupted. "That week-end, we talked it over."

"All right, I don't want to know." But Keith could tell that his father was relieved.

"It's odd, Father, that you decided to talk about this. I was just at the point of having enough energy to want to communicate with her. She must be having a very difficult time."

"No," said the old man. "Only soft women have a very difficult time."

"Felicia's not quite as hard as she pretended," Keith said.

"That's good. You should defend her. Not many people will." There were memories in his mind now that Keith could only guess about. Did he wish that little Mary Sheldie had found more defenders in her last hours?

"I suppose she'll go to Reno, Father, and it'll be a six weeks' scandal. Then people will forget."

"Yes, those things are more easily managed nowadays."

"Will you send a telegram to her from me, Father? I'll have to dictate it, until they take this cast off."

"No. I mean, I'll send it if you want, but I wish you'd stop and think first."

His manner of saying that was so quiet, so understanding, that Keith could not be exasperated.

"What is there to think about, though, Father? I can't be blamed for not letting her know I was standing by, in these weeks when I've been in a fairly dazed state. But surely she must let her know now, as quickly as is possible."

Hesitantly, his father spoke. "I've been so antagonistic to you, Keith, that I've no right to ask you to listen to me now. But I wish you would."

"Of course I will." He was just a little impatient about it, though. What was use of long discussion?

Father's Advice

His father said: "I want you to stop and think of the person in this situation about whom no one ever thinks, except with a sort of amusement, and with contempt. I want you to think of her husband."

"Not much use now, is it?"

"Perhaps. Perhaps not. Because I was once the husband in a case like this, his position seems important to me. He has so small a chance. I've been finding out, as much as I could discreetly, Keith, about what's happening to her and her husband. His people are causing as much trouble as possible, but Eustace Dayne is saying nothing, calling on his wife three times a day, behaving to his friends as if his marriage were just as permanent as before—as before what happened. He seems to be in love with her, Keith."

"I don't doubt it. She's not, though, with him."

His father hurried his words. "Please don't think I'm blaming her, or you. Unaccountable things happen to people. Only one has to be told to admit that truly."

"You may as well know, Father, she's not madly in love with me, either."

"Nor you with her. I judged that."

The seven words were a statement.

Even so, Keith felt they demanded some show of protest. "In my fashion."

"Not as you once were in love with her sister. I spoiled that for you."

"Not altogether. I had a hand in it. Which is pretty much beside the point. She married the better man, as the Victorians would have phrased it piously. This is a fairly difficult conversation, Father."

"Yes. It's difficult to be intimate. Better not, most of the time. My attempt is only—" He stopped and began again.

"Perhaps, perhaps Keith want to go on with her husband after she realizes how well he behaving. If that's true, you—"

"Can't be so. She's proud."

"Then do this. Wait a little, to make sure you're right."

"To give Eustace Dayne his chance, in short."

"Yes."

"I should say he's had a chance in the nearly four years of their marriage."

"It's in crises that you have your chance."

Keith was suddenly dreadfully tired. It would all wait for another day, surely. He was thinking: "In crises you have your chance." On an October day when the leaves were splashes of gold and yellow on the streets in the park, when Denise had so desperately wanted him to give her reassurance, and he had been determined not to be hurried! His chance was blown as far as last October's air.

When he was well enough, he wrote to Felicia, telephoned the switchboard at her apartment to make sure she was at home, learned that she was at her father's, and sent the letter on by messenger.

Felicia Replies

It was, as he wrote, a completely inadequate letter, but he could manage no better. For no affection of his father's sentence stifled anything tender he might have said. "I want you to think of him of whom no one in these situations thinks, except with a sort of amusement with curiosity."

No, he would not write love-letters to Felicia until she and her husband were officially separated. He would write no more than was necessary. Denise was fastidious, and would understand.

She was fastidious; but, as did not occur to him, she was too pre-occupied with her own problems to be able to analyze his.

He was startled by the indignation plain in her response, wrote a rapid answer—and read in the next day's paper of her sailing.

He was neither relieved, nor very angry with her. She must do what she wanted. He would prefer to go on with her than alone, since now he never could go on with Denise. But his preference was not vital.

Realizing that it was not, he realized how much deeper had been his affection for that girl who had not waited for him, who had made haste to resolve her life. The old tag was "Marry in haste, and repent at leisure." Denise had had, by now, leisure to repent. But whether she had regretted or not, he was scarcely likely to discover.

It was incredible that Felicia should expect Keith to visit her at Denise's house! So he thought, until the moment of receiving Felicia's mistress from the door. Then he decided that he understood. (By then he'd looked over a file of newspapers.) Felicia felt the need of fortifying herself with the chaperonage of her well-married sister, her brother-in-law and her parents.

Sudden decision came to him. If Felicia wanted that—and Denise was willing—he would go. He would look at Denise, happy with her husband, probably, and no doubt behaving as a stranger who would be regarded without much interest, as happy young wives had a way of regarding men they had not married. Her eyes would be intense.

She had said to him once: "I shall never hate you. I've cared too much." He had said to her, cruelly: "Nothing nowadays is forever." But ten crowded months had quite changed them from the people who said those things in confidently.

And having looked at Denise, and at her husband, he would do whatever her charming sister suggested thereafter.

Keith had seen very few friends during his convalescence, none of whom had mentioned to him, or were likely to, that Gilbert Windon was coming back to America, while his wife would spend the summer in England with her people. He took it for granted that his invitations would cease, if it came, with Gilbert Windon's knowledge and approval. So he wirelessed Felicia he would come if Denise asked him.

For a long time thereafter he heard nothing from her or of her.

Rhumba Dress for Southland

GAY AND INVITING as the rattle of gourds striking up a Cuban dance rhythm . . . intriguing as the repetitious beat of sticks that holds the seductive melody in leash . . . that's the very spirit of this chic new southern fashion. It's a Fashion Congress selection, and is called the "Rhumba Dress," a design adapted from a Molyneux original. Miss Cornelia Pentecost models. Subtle in design—it is shirred all over, the stitching taken out, and the fabric tucked in tiers from chin to hem. This treatment runs the dots together in fascinating pattern. White dots on wine crepe for the frock, white dots on navy for the belt. There is a tiny roll-back white collar, and the sash ties round and round like a sash in a dancer's. The wide baku hat is worn back to show the hairline, as most summer hats, even the widest trimmed, will be worn. For shopping information on this unusual southern fashion, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American

Josephine Culbertson On Bridge

Making a Defender Guess

It is the opinion of most experts that defense play is the ne-plus-ultra of bridge.

The play described is today's hand does not deserve inclusion in this exalted rank, but it does point out the difference between imaginative and wooden defense.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	2♣	Pass
2♠	Pass	4♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

West chose the eight of spades as the lead most apt to do harm. Declarer's Ace captured East's King, and after careful analysis of the situation, declarer laid down the Ace of diamonds.

He could not afford to draw trumps, because he did not yet know the lay of certain key cards, nor could he be sure of the trump division itself. At the third trick he led a small heart toward dummy's Queen. West hopped up with the King, and correctly returned a heart, to remove dummy's only viable entry.

Declarer now led dummy's diamond Queen, intending a ruffing-finesse through East. But East had been able to draw a shrewd deduction from the manner in which declarer had started to play the hand, and he saw that it was almost a certainty that South had started with the singleton diamond Ace and was now attempting to establish dummy's suit.

A WRONG GUESS

He could count that his partner's (West's) ten of diamonds would fall on the third round of the suit, which would automatically establish three remaining diamonds. Thus, if he were to cover the Queen and South were to ruff, trumps would be drawn and, when dummy was reentered with either a heart ruff or the nine of spades, declarer would have no choice but to lay down the Ace of clubs, whereupon he would find the suit ready-made.

Therefore East determined to give declarer "a guess." He passed the diamond Queen, and, as expected, declarer discarded an club, but now declarer was faced with a sheer guess. He said not tell whether to lead a low diamond or the Jack.

Declarer cannot be censured for guessing wrong. He led the nine. East naturally ducked, and declarer ruffed. Declarer now attempted to take out dummy's clubs so that the third round could be ruffed, but the defenders led trumps and declarer found himself with one more loser than he had trumps in dummy with which to ruff.

Beeckman ON Good MANNERS

WEDDING DINNER

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I plan to be married informally, attired in a wedding dress and Juliet cap (no veil). Only my mother, a family friend, who will give me away, and his wife; my matron of honor, and the best man and his wife will witness the Episcopal ceremony. Afterward I plan to have a dinner party, with about twenty-five of my closest friends present.

1—In receiving the guests to the party, who should be in the receiving line and in what order?

4—When and how should the small boxes of wedding cake be distributed? Is it proper to set them near the place card at each individual place?

5—After the bride cuts the first piece of cake, is there any particular order in which the other members of the party follow suit?

6—Must the members of the wedding party, including myself, wear hats at the dinner which will be held at home, but in a small private dining room?

1—First in your reception line should be your mother, who as hostess, receives the guests. Then it would be gracious to have the family friend who is to present you in marriage, and next to him, his wife.

You don't mention having the groom's mother and father; but if they are to be present, or if any member of his family is to be present in their stead, the parents or the other family members should stand next.

Then the groom, then you, at the groom's right, and at your right, your matron of honor. The best man and his wife would not be in the receiving-line.

2—If you are to have one table, as I take for granted, you and your groom would sit at one end of the table, side by side, you at the groom's right. At the groom's left would be your matron of honor; at your right, the best man.

At the other end of the table would be your mother and at her right, the clergyman, if he is to be present. If neither is to be present, the person in the family friend who is presenting you in marriage. Other relatives and friends are seated according to closeness of family connection and to congeniality.

3—The bride's mother is the hostess of the occasion, and so assumes all of the duties of hostess, welcoming the guests, making necessary introductions, and so forth.

4—It would be proper to have a box of wedding cake at each place, or, if you prefer, you might, as is usual, have these piled on a tray placed on a table near the door. Then as the guests depart, they take a box of the cake.

5—If the cake is served at table it is passed as any other food is passed, in the order of the seating.

6—If the guests wear evening or semi-formal attire, they would not wear hats at the dinner. If they dress informally at the ceremony, in street-costume with hats, they probably would wish to keep on their hats. Since you are to have a private dining-room, this would be a matter of choice.

A Simple Buffet Service Plan

By MARTHA LEE

NEW YEAR'S Eve is a grand time to entertain at an informal, thoroughly enjoyable party. Everyone's mind is distinctly gay in anticipation of a glad New Year, old friends and new discard excess dignity and come right down to the business of having a good time.

The buffet supper, served either at 7 or 8 p. m. before the evening festivities or at midnight as the New Year dawns is the perfect form of service.

A long table or buffet may be set against the wall if space is limited, or the square or round dining table may be set in the middle of the dining room so that guests can pass on either side to serve themselves.

The general plan of service may be extremely simple. A filling hot dish set at one end with the stacks of warm plates, the coffee at the opposite end, and in between rolls, relishes, salad or vegetable is the usual arrangement. Guests may be asked to return to the dining room to deposit dinner plates and pick up their own dessert, or the dessert may be passed.

Decorations depend on the size and shape of the table. A center piece of 2 or 4 small dried trees in different heights, hung with tiny red balls is always gay and informal, as is a glass tray of colored fruits flanked with tall red tapers.

For the more formal table try a long line of red tapers at the back of the buffet or through the center of the table varying in height from the very tall to the short. Use some boughs of green pine at the base of the candles. A low bowl of varied colored Christmas balls centered in a mass of green pine or holly is equally effective.

The menu is most important and varies according to the time of night at which it is served. The 7 or 8 o'clock supper hour demands a filling hot dish, a vegetable, a salad, rolls, relish, beverage and a simple dessert.

The midnight supper usually consists of cold platter, relishes, salad and assorted breads and cake or cookies with lots of hot coffee. For a very informal gathering you may prefer hot frankforts, German potato salad, relishes and celery, finger rolls and coffee or beer with no dessert served at all.

HAM, MUSHROOM AND NOODLES

2 cups left over ham
2 cups bread noodles
1½ cups medium white sauce
½ cup mushroom caps
1 tablespoon pimiento
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
½ cup buttered cracker crumbs

Cut ham into small cubes. Cook noodles in boiling salted water for 20 minutes. Drain and rinse. Make sauce by melting 2 tablespoons butter, adding 2 tablespoons flour and 1½ cups milk. Stir until thick and season. In a casserole, arrange a layer of noodles then ham, white sauce, mushroom and pimiento. Top with layer of buttered crumbs. Bake 40 minutes in a 350 deg. F. oven.

CHAPTER 187

THERE is nothing which so tranquilizes my nerves, and at the same time so exhilirates me with a sense of well-being as the chance to drive along seldom-frequented roads. I do not care much what season of the year forms the setting for my journey.

All I ask is sunshine and clear air. But, of course, a beautiful May day such as was vouchsafed us for the beginning of our trip to New Hampshire seemed to me a boon straight from heaven.

"What a wonderful luck!" Katherine said as we drove up to the ferry, only to have the man in charge motion us to stop, shutting the gates between us and the car just preceding us in line.

"Why, no more?" I repeated incredulously. Then, as realization dawned upon me, I mentally kicked myself for my stupidity. A corollary, "We'll be the very first in line on the next boat."

The prospect compensated me for the loss of time and the rather tedious wait until the next boat. When we were aboard on the ferry, with Mary's car and mine side by side at the front rail, and Mary and Jack just behind mine, I was startled to see Williams, appear at the door to my car, with Scott on a leash.

BOYS ANXIOUS, TOO

"The dog's getting restless," he said. "There aren't many people on this morning. I thought I'd let him jump around a bit."

Junior turned beseeching eyes up to mine.

"Aw, Mums!" he said, his voice a prayer.

From the car beside us, another pair of boyish eyes pleaded, and Roderick also made his plea vocal.

"Aw, Auntie Madge!"

I turned to Williams for decision. After all, his was the responsibility if the boys joined him and the dog at the rail.

"Are you willing to have them get out with you?" I asked.

"Sure thing," he answered, "if they'll mind what I say to them."

I leaned toward the other car. "Come over here, Roderick," I said, and the boy almost tore the door loose from its hinges in his impetuous rush to us.

"If you two boys will promise me, scout honor, that you will stick close to Mr. Williams and do exactly what he tells you, you may get out of the car and stand by the railing with him. Do you promise?"

Mary descended from her car and crowded to us.

"Mind if I go, too?" she asked. "I haven't leaned over a ferry rail since my wedding trip."

"No, no," I repeated, smiling at her. "After all, you are not Junior's age, nor Roderick's, you know."

"I'm not so sure," she threw back over her shoulder, as she joined the others, stooping to pet the collie that adores her.

"I'm not so sure, either," Katherine echoed softly from the seat behind me.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Where Can Best Husbands Be Found? Reader Wants to Know

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

[illegible] tells me that Continental men make better [illegible] than American. She says Americans are prosaic, don't [illegible] enough nice compliments and think their wives too much for granted [illegible] is true.

Where I've had very little experience with foreigners I've understood [illegible] their wives to have a marriage portion and bring them home a substantial sum in the way of money.

In your opinion are the best husbands to be found

AMERICAN WIFE.

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Good and bad husbands, fortunately or unfortunately, are found in all countries. No country has a monopoly of them.

They're NOT to be found in those rare blooms advertised in florists' catalogue, where an advertising star warns you not to attempt to grow them in a certain degree of longitude and latitude.

Husbands carry no warning stars. They can be successfully cultivated anywhere—that is, they can be pruned, if it's done carefully and with tact.

Hepburn's Superb Performance In 'Jane Eyre' Given High Rating

GOOD CAST DOES EXCELLENT WORK IN MOSSY OLD TIME NOVEL

Old-Time Thriller Pleases Crowd At Colonial

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Eyes ahead, her courage and self-confidence upholding her from the first scene to the last curtain, Katharine Hepburn gave a performance last night in the old Charlotte Bronte thriller, "Jane Eyre," that entitles her to critical esteem as that of a first-rate actress.

KATHARINE HEPBURN DENNIS HOEY REGINALD MALCOLM

In its first performance at an important theatrical premiere, the Boston Evening American Candid Camera succeeded in capturing the image of Katharine Hepburn as Jane Eyre, the role in which the star has chosen to return to the stage. This scene, showing Dennis Hoey as "Mr Rochester" greeting Reginald Malcolm as Reverend Wood, "to leave Thornfield Hall after the clergyman refuses to proceed with Rochester's marriage to Jane Eyre, was made from a seat in the Colonial Theater orchestra. The star, who has denied herself to interviewers and photographers since her arrival Sunday, was not aware that the Candid Camera was watching her earnest performance.

Jimmy Braddock Gives Demonstration of Fight Prowess

By JACK CONWAY

JIMMY Braddock tried himself out in ten rounds of fighting against better than average heavyweights behind the closed doors of a private gymnasium in New York before he signed to defend his world's heavyweight championship against Max Schmeling in a 15 round bout in New York on June 3.

I [illegible] after word how we were permitted to see Braddock in action.

"Braddock had not fought since he won the world's championship from Max Baer in New York a year ago last June," my informant told me. "Jimmy was smart enough to know that ring rust kills as many boxers as actual punches, and so wanted to find out how good he was before he signed to defend his championship.

Mr. Boston

"If he found he was washed up, he said he would only battle Joe Louis as that would be the best payoff match. If his trial should convince him he had an even chance to defend his title successfully, he would go through with the Schmeling bout.

"We signed up five pretty fair heavyweights, encased their dukes in small gloves, locked the doors of a little private gym on 59th street in New York, and sent each man against the champion for two rounds, making ten sessions in all.

Braddock's $500,000 Purse Faded

I FEEL sympathetic towards Braddock who came up off a welfare roll to win the heavyweight title. I visited Jimmy in his suite at the Mayflower Hotel, New York, the morning after he won the championship from Max Baer. Mrs. Braddock was with him at the time.

"We are back in the money again," Jimmy said to me simply. "You know I have made and lost a fortune. Back in 1928, the year I boxed Tommy Loughran for the light heavyweight title, I was sitting on top of the world. Poor investments took my money, and I ended up working along the docks. I remarried my old time fire, and was fortunate in winning the title. I intend to make every dime possible out of the championship, and hope that when I retire from the ring I shall have financial independence for my family and myself."

HANEY ON TRADE

Car Loading Figures
LEND ENCOURAGEMENT
To Business Outlook

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, Dec. 29—Last week, of course, saw some letdown in business activity, as is usual when Christmas comes.

On the whole, however, the dip in the activity curve was less than usual.

This is doubly encouraging. It shows that business not only gains more than usual when it moves up, but also loses less than usual when it reacts.

Any properly adjusted composite of the standard statistical indexes that are available by weeks, will show a new high since 1929.

In fact, I believe that lumber production is the only important weekly index which is below normal. (This reflects the relative backwardness of the building industries.)

There are so many cases in which producers have large unfilled orders on their books, and so few cases of large inventories, it seems doubtful that any decline in activity will occur next month.

The rising trend of commodity prices, and the fact that fears of labor difficulties tend to stimulate orders, both lead to the same conclusion.

Last week, steel production reacted less than usual on account of the holiday. All indications point to a prompt resumption of the preceding operating rate around 80 per cent of capacity.

It is generally agreed that steel mills have business booked sufficient to keep them running full blast until the end of January.

Meanwhile, new railway buying for repairs and additions is sustained, as is buying of sheets and strips by automobile producers.

The demand for tin plate has increased sharply.

By the end of January, orders for structural steel should begin to pick up.

Incidentally, I note that the price of steel scrap has risen again, and pig iron has been marked up another 50 cents a ton for delivery after January 1.

The automobile industry, while still under a cloud as the result of strike possibilities, now looks better. Orders have been heavy and, toward the end of the week, two strikes were settled. Thus a shutdown in the Ford plant was prevented.

The main point, however, is that it now seems more probable that the various labor troubles affecting this industry can be settled by compromise.

Another unusually active industry continues to hold its pace —cotton manufacturing. Moreover, the volume of unfilled orders for print cloth, etc., is so large that no considerable reaction is in early prospect.

One of the most encouraging facts is the way railway car loadings are holding up better than usual for the season.

To this we can add the large physical volume of retail trade. Retail prices are considerably lower than in 1929, and when allowance is made for that, it seems probable that retail transactions by weight or number closely approximate 1929 levels.

Along with the improvement in business activity has come a rise in wholesale commodity prices, as is usual in any cyclical recovery. This rise in prices is more pronounced than any which has occurred since the big jump in 1933.

This is the surest indication that the demand for goods has been freed by the removal of uncertainties.

Last week advances occurred in wheat, flour, corns, hogs, lard, copper, lead, zinc, steel scrap, cotton, rubber and hides. Corn, rosin, tin and silk were a little lower.

Outstanding events were as follows:

1—The settlement of strikes that threatened to tie up the automobile industry shows that compromise will probably be the result of labor difficulties and that higher wages are likely to chase higher prices around the table leg in the merry game of inflation.

2—Developments in European diplomacy suggest postponement of war.

3—The measures taken by our government to sterilize gold suggest continued attempts to "control" inflation without doing anything to stop it.

RAPID Retirement of DEBT
ADVOCATED BY ECONOMIST

Chicago, Dec. 29 (AP)—Simeon E. Leland, professor of economics at the University of Chicago, advocated today rapid retirement of the federal debt by the imposition of "the largest possible amount of taxes" which can be collected and still allow a reasonable rate of business expansion.

In a paper prepared for the American Economic Association, Prof. Leland recommended presidential appointment of a committee to study the government in formulating a proper debt policy and to develop an effective will on the part of the taxpayers to pay for retirement.

To meet future emergencies, such as depression and war, he continued, the nation must maintain its credit, and the best way to do so is by prompt retirement of its debt.

Concrete Terms

"Translated into concrete terms, the United States must have a period of genuine debt liquidation before the advent of the next severe depression or next war, for which public loans will be required," he explained.

Unless the government and its people face the will to retire this new debt before large public credits are needed again, it may never be able to borrow as much as it needs on such occasions or on so favorable terms again," Professor Leland warned.

In proposing taxes for debt retirement the economist said:

"Emphasis should be placed primarily on direct taxes on income and wealth. The maximum rates of the inheritance, estate and gift taxes cannot be moved upward at least for some time to come. Extension of the base and upward graduation of rates of the lower and middle brackets should be contemplated.

"The corporate surplus tax should be strengthened to make more effective personal income taxation and the known defects in the law should be removed. Under no circumstances should this law be repealed or its teeth removed."

FCC Studies ATT Film Financing

Due to competition by Radio Corporation of America in 1931 and 1932, Electrical Research Products, Inc., began to finance independent motion picture producers, Assistant Attorney General Stanley Reed told the Federal Communications Commission, investigating activities of American Telephone & Telegraph Company in the motion picture field. During A. T. & T. sole authority under questioning as Western Electric Company and Electrical Research Products, Inc.

Whitford Drake, former examiner with the Federal Trade Commission, who was employed by Electrical Research Products, Inc., was placed on the stand by special Federal Communications Commission Counsel Berge T. Ellis was shown by Mr. Drake that due to competition of Radio Corporation of America, Electrical Research Products, Inc., late in 1931 began to finance independent motion picture producers. This was the start of what is now Electrical Research Products, Inc., policy.

Mr. Drake testified that under ERPI's general policy it would not finance more than 50 per cent of cost of a motion picture studio and the studio was not to cost more than $300,000. ERPI participation was to be limited and ERPI insisted on a guarantee of good distribution of pictures produced.

The A. & T. sole authority under the first producers' share, until the banks, with interest, were repaid.

It was stated that by 1935, when independent production was at its peak, ERPI had a revolving financing fund of $800,000.

COMMODITY Price Index Up

Rising for the 18th consecutive week, wholesale commodity prices index compiled by the National Fertilizer Association rose in the week ended December 26 to the highest point registered since September, 1926.

The increase took the index to 85.1 per cent of the 1926-28 average against 85.0 per cent in the preceding week, 85.2 per cent a month ago and 77.9 per cent a year ago.

Bache Finds 1937 Outlook Promising

Expressing the belief that the great gains made during the year 1936 will not only be held but that further moderate progress will be evidenced as the year unfolds itself, the brokerage house of J. S. Bache & Company in its New Year's greetings to its friends adopts a constructive attitude for the coming year and states that "we feel encouraged by the outlook and enter 1937 with confidence."

"With the passing of the year 1936, it is well worth looking back and reviewing the forebodings with which many economists viewed the advent of that year," the letter states. "A new era has been ushered in, bringing as it did unknown innovations, the results raising numerous doubts in many minds.

"While we have no desire to join the 'I Told You So' class, we cannot refrain from quoting from our New Year letter of January, 1936, which said in part: 'We face 1936 with determination to go ahead and confidence in the results to be gained thereby.'

"To repeat these words for 1937, but the coming year differs from the year past to the extent that the great improvements made in 1936 were so outstanding that they probably cannot be duplicated in 1937. We do believe, however, that not only will these gains be held, but further moderate progress will be evidenced as the year unfolds itself."

Aviation Booms To New Highs

Chicago, Dec. 29 (AP)—Commercial aviation boomed to new highs in passenger, mail and express divisions in 1936, says the annual statement by the Air Transport Association of America.

United States airlines, including those operating internationally, carried 1,140,000 passengers, 21 per cent more than the 860,261 of 1935. Having passenger miles totaled 395,814,000, compared with 309,797,000 in 1935—the previous high—and 169,740,000 in 1934.

Air express pound-miles increased by almost three-fourths to 3,809,000,000, against 2,186,000,000 in 1935, and air mail pound-miles totaled 12,000,000,000, compared with 8,263,160,628 in 1935.

The lines, expanding their service to new frontiers, now reach 200 cities in 45 states, 21 Latin American and West Indies countries, Alaska, Hawaii and the Orient.

LOEW'S BOSTON To Take State

Stockholders of Loew's Boston Theaters Co. at annual meeting approved dissolution of the State Theater Co. Latter action was also voted by the State Theater Co. stockholders. The State Theater Co. will distribute all of its rights, assets, etc., to stockholders in cancellation of its outstanding stock.

As the Loew's Boston Theaters Co. on Aug. 31, 1936 owned 80,038 of the outstanding 86,358 shares of the State Theater Co. the same capital liability, the practical net result of the transaction will be the distribution to Loew's Boston Theaters Co. of its 6,320 shares.

It is expected that stock not held by Loew's will receive something better than $17 a share in liquidation. Directors were re-elected.

PONTIAC'S SALES Almost Double

Retail deliveries of new Pontiac cars in the first 20 days of December totaled 14,045 units, against 10,694 in first 20 days of November and 5,963 in first period of December last year, setting a new record for this season of the year.

Although the plant has been setting new production records for this time of the year, volume of unsolicited unfilled orders remains virtually unchanged with unsatisfied retail demand preventing build-up of field stocks.

DISTRIBUTION
Compared on Percentage Basis

This chart traces the distribution of gross farm income before, during and after the depression.

By comparing the distribution of gross farm income on a percentage basis, we can get a better picture of just what proportion of this income was consumed by expenses and what proportion the farmers were able to retain as "net income."

Although the farmers "earned" fewer dollars in 1935 than in 1929 they were able to realize greater "profits" on each dollar earned in 1935.

Compare these two years on a gross dollar earning basis. In 1929 farmers realized a net income from gross income of 48.7 per cent or, for the purpose of simple comparison, 48.7 cents of every dollar earned from farm production represented their "profit." In 1935 it was 51 cents.

Farmers paid only 3.2 cents out of the dollar for wages in 1935 as compared with 8 cents in 1929. Interest and taxes was 6.7 cents of the dollar compared with 7.8 cents in 1929.

Current expenses and rent paid were approximately the same for both these years. Depreciation on farm equipment, buildings, etc., was higher in 1935, 6.5 cents of the gross income dollar as compared with 5.3 cents in 1929.

Road's Operating Revenues Up

Washington, Dec. 28 (INS)—Advance reports from 101 class one railroads representing 91 per cent of total operating revenues, show these roads in November had a net railway operating income of $65,906,297, compared with $48,979,-000 in the same month last year, the Association of American Railroads announced today.

Operating revenues of these roads in November totaled $326,-609,056 compared with $274,282,509 in November last year or an increase of 19.1 per cent.

Operating expenses of the same roads in November totalled $226,-769,957 compared with $199,476,839 in November last year, an increase of 13.4 per cent.

Taxes paid in November by these railroads amounted to $24,375,294 compared with $16,464,820 in November, 1935, an increase of 48 per cent.

FOREIGN Trade Pattern IN U. S.
RADICAL CHANGES

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

New York, Dec. 29—A radical change in the foreign trade pattern of the United States has been gradually taking place.

The so-called favorable balance of trade in merchandise, the excess of exports over imports, has all but disappeared this year.

The cumulative excess of merchandise exports over imports during the first 10 months amounted to only $19,659,000 for the period, compared with $98,434,000 in the corresponding months a year ago and $295,857,000 in the first 10 months of 1934.

The actual situation is much more pronounced than the foregoing totals indicate, for they do not include imports of gold and silver. If these precious metals are treated as commodities, then the balance is converted into a huge adverse balance of trade. In the first 10 months, net imports of gold amounted to $363,778,000 and of silver to $173,781,000.

These imports of precious metals resulted in giving foreign sellers huge dollar purchasing power, but, as in the two previous years, the foreigners did not elect to use such dollars to increase their purchases of American farm products and manufactured merchandise correspondingly; instead they converted them into dollar securities and bank deposits.

Thus, the assumption that by importing more we would necessarily export more is knocked into a cocked hat.

On the contrary, the effect of huge American imports of gold and service is to build up for these non-earning assets valuable earning assets in the form of American securities. In addition, the problem of alien absentee ownership of American properties develops on an increasing scale.

President Roosevelt alluded to this problem before his recent trip to South America, and George N. Peek, former special trade adviser to the President, made the facts clear some two and a half years ago.

Thus, classical free trade doctrine is being built up against the bedrock of reality.

From the standpoint of controlling the gold supply, the measures at Washington have recently taken steps designed to sterilize the new gold coming in. Many people are thinking a step beyond and are asking why continue to bid $35 an ounce for unlimited amounts of foreign gold which we do not want or need.

It is difficult to merge from the present anomalous position without taking a number of correspondingly drastic steps.

Cessation of foreign buying of gold would necessitate an embargo on gold exports, except under special conditions, and also a policy of attempting to settle imports on a basis more nearly equal exports of goods and services. That would entail precise international bookkeeping vis-a-vis other countries and would preclude funding outstanding accounts in the form of long-term loans.

In connection with the reasons for business recovery in 1936, perhaps the most significant has been an improved balanced relationship of group income in the United States, the group, which had been worst out of line, namely, the farmers, continued to make further improvement.

In spite of drought, curtailed crops, the farmers received the best gross income since 1929, getting an estimated gross of $9,500 millions, compared with $11,941 millions in 1929. Students of economic balance have computed that a farm gross of $12,000 millions to $14,000 millions would permit a full re-employment of labor on a plateau of maximum national prosperity.

Depression consumes about 2 per cent of the people earning 96 per cent, and may usually be viewed in light of the estimate that automobile registrations in 1936 will have risen to a total of some peak of 28,500,000 vehicles. A motor minded American public spends almost as much on buying cars at retail as on food.

NEW DIRECTORS Southern N. E. Tel.

New Haven, Ct., Dec. 29 (INS)—Two Connecticut men today had been elected directors of the Southern New England Telephone Company. They were D. Spencer Bagnall of this city and Fuller F. Barnes of Bristol.

Directors of the company also declared a quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share on the capital stock, payable January 15, 1937 to stockholders of record December 31, 1936.

Cross Currents

CROSS CURRENTS which develop in industry tend to perplex investors. While some corporations have experienced broad recovery since 1932, others have seen only a minor advance from subnormal business. Not only the trend of markets but the potential earning power of each industry must receive consideration if the investor is to take the best advantage of present conditions.

Our Statistical Department is prepared to render counsel to investors in respect to what industries and what securities within each industry offer the better opportunities at this time.

Maine Central R. R.

November EXPENSES Jumped

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Rehabilitation of equipment and maintenance of way expenses above those of last year, together with increased taxes, appear responsible for the less favorable comparisons of Maine Central Railroad's earnings in November.

For the month surplus after charges this year amounted to $31,784, compared with a total of $65,728 in November, 1935.

As a matter of fact an increase in revenues of $36 last month was just slightly more than half of the 30 per cent jump in expenses. Maine Central spent $98,274 more for maintenance of equipment than in November last year and $41,041 more for maintenance of way and structures. These increases, previous included an item of $11,163 for flood repairs. Chiefly as a result of the latter, taxes and Social Security charges were jumped $17,800.

It was not so many weeks ago that Professor Kemmerer of Princeton expressed the opinion that rising commodity prices would bring deeper money. On Monday the Dow-Jones commodity index was down to a modest advance, to a new high. At the top for the session it stood at slightly over 82 as against 81.97 at the previous close and 82.06 at the session's end. This is in obvious contrast to the motive force Professor Kemmerer expects will bring deeper money rates is now operating. To some extent, there is a rebuttal to those who argue that the country can't take it. It is true war fear speculation is the force behind the rise. But this will be drawing the line too fine for what does it matter as far as country at large is concerned exactly required to move the astronomical volumes of commodities?

The stock market by its cheerful forecasts of a renewed rally, promises to dragline a few cats, including some from the bottom bone. None will accept that precedent was strongly in favor, but it is likely to hold true to prove the rule that are trouble-some. Just another reason we preach that quality issues in the markets as they are is preferred to what the records show they have been in the past. Don't forget strength in the near few sessions is entirely possible, but it will take a good imagination to call those days of early morn in retrospect. We are only advises to put on your wise advice of 50 per cent liquidity, but suggest you are strength.

MARKET Trend UNEVEN

TRADING PACE SLOW

New York, Dec. 29 — Timid stock market buyers picked up selected issues in today's proceedings, but steered clear of many of the leaders.

In comparatively slow trading prices displayed slightly uneven trends near the fourth hour.

Rallying handicaps apparently included a little more selling for income tax returns and further labor upsets in the automotive sector.

Some commodities, especially export copper, bounced up to recovered peaks, while rubber grain and cotton futures were inclined to ease.

A "sit-down" strike at the plant of General Motors subsidiary, Fisher Body Company, was followed by a minor decline in the former's shares. Chrysler, however, was a bit better than even.

Some of the oils again edged forward. Among these were Standards of N. J., California and Indiana, Texas Corporation and Seaboard.

Others showing an upward tilt small of a session included Douglas Aircraft, North American Aviation, Sears Roebuck, Woolworth, Deere, International Harvester, Ward, Macy, Boeing, Auburn, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, J. I. Case, American Telephone, Western Union, Consolidated Edison, Anaconda, Kennecott, General Electric, du Pont, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central and Union Pacific.

Timely Items

Fresh labor difficulties, including a "sit-down" strike at the Cleveland plant of the Fisher Body Company, a subsidiary of General Motors, helped to chill market sentiment before the opening.

Among constructive items were: Railroad freight department gross sales for December probably will show an increase of at least 12 per cent over the 1935 total, railroad statements indicating November net operating income of the principal class one roads by 28 per cent ahead of the same month last year; figures of the Federal Reserve Board disclosing easy commercial loans of interior banks, normally receding this time of year, recorded an upturn for the week ended December 23.

Sterling, at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions, was up 5-16 of a cent at $4.92, and the French franc was .00½ of a cent improved at 4.67¾ cents.

Firemen to Honor Chief 'Sam' Pope

Fire officials from all parts of the state, as well as city and state officials, will gather in the Bradford tonight to pay honor to Chief Samuel J. Pope, recently appointed head of the Boston fire department.

Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin is honorary chairman of the committee in charge of the testimonial dinner and Daniel J. Looney, secretary of the Massachusetts State Firemen's Association is executive chairman.

Frederick J. Sullivan, chairman of the Boston school committee will act as toastmaster.

Other organizations participating in the affair to honor the youngest man ever to attain the position of chief of the Boston fire department include Russell Fire Club, Officers Club of the Boston fire department, State Firemen's Association and the Permanent Firemen's Association.

"Sam" Pope, as he is familiarly known to a host of friends, entered the department in 1912. He became lieutenant in 1926, a captain a year later and a district chief in 1930.

Pigeon Exhibit At Poultry Show

A record entry of pigeons coming from most of the famous pigeon lofts both in the United States and England will be exhibited at the Boston Poultry Show which opens in Mechanics building, Wednesday and closes Sunday evening.

Under the auspices of the New England Pigeon Association and the Eastern Pigeon Club many rare and popular species of pigeons will be exhibited.

The famous Jones Sprague trophy awarded each year for the grand champion Young Pigeon in the show will be one of the important contests during the exhibit. Challenge cups will also be awarded in the adult, yearling, young blue, young grizzle, young white, young checks and young silver classes. adv

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC HEALTH MINIMUM WAGE COMMISSION

WOMEN'S CLOTHING OCCUPATION

The Minimum Wage Commission is in receipt of the report of the wage board recently appointed for the above occupation. The board, consisting of seven members, appointed a chairman report, which has been accepted by the Commission.

The Minimum Wage Law provides that a wage board, similar to the court of inquiry, shall be appointed by the Commission with the administrative regulations of the department.

In response to the invitation of the chairman of the Minimum Wage Commission, the undersigned members of the board met in Room 1052, State House, to obtain information from persons engaged in the industry to determine what, if any, minimum wage rates should be established for women and minors in the industry. To which persons connected with the industry are certain matters of fact and law were put in controversy. The board therefore has submitted a report from which the following minimum wage board, the statistics relative to the wages and other conditions of competitive conditions in the industry as between Massachusetts and other states, as well as localities outside of the state, that in formulating its decision it should give consideration to the wages paid in such localities, and to the competitive conditions existing between the state, and that the board had made findings to that effect and incorporated the same in its report to the Commissioner.

The board first considered fairly with the question of a minimum wage.

(1) An experienced female worker is a person who has had at least one year's experience in the occupation in question.

(2) An apprentice is a female who has been employed in the industry for a period of three months or less.

(3) A learner is a female who has been employed in the industry for a period of three months and who has not completed the number of hours of employment at which she has worked in the industry.

(4) No classification is made for minors, as the board is of the belief that the two preceding classifications amply cover all cases of minors.

The employees in the industry fall generally into two classes, namely, those who operate machines and those who do not operate machines. The examiners are agreed that the latter class of employees are the highest paid inasmuch as they possess the greatest skill and experience. They make, however, the board did not deem it necessary to establish a minimum wage for this class of employees but to make one rate applicable to all. The board is of the opinion that the duties, even in different establishments, vary so much that it would be impossible to establish a minimum wage for this class of employees to be in force in more than one establishment.

The board, however, did consider that the duties of those who operate machines in many establishments constituting a market for skilled labor, and that the duties, responsibilities and competitive conditions between and fair competitive conditions between and fair competitive conditions between such establishments are substantially the same, and that a minimum wage was to be fixed upon as high as could be established without working an undue hardship upon any establishment. The board, after carefully considering the testimony presented to the board, but not limited thereto, and after a full discussion having in mind the nature of the present and future business of the industry, as well as the welfare of the employees, is of the opinion that a fair minimum wage for experienced women workers in the stores referred to in the tabulations above referred to, should be not less than $16 per week.

The board is of the opinion that a fair minimum wage for experienced minors should be no less than $14 per week.

The board is of the opinion that a fair minimum wage for apprentices shall be no less than $12 per week.

The board is of the opinion that a fair minimum wage for learners shall be no less than $10 per week.

The board, having set forth a resume of the testimony presented to the board, but not limited thereto, and after a full discussion having in mind the nature of the present and future business of the industry, as well as the welfare of the employees, is of the opinion that a fair minimum wage for experienced women workers in the stores referred to in the tabulations above referred to, should be not less than $16 per week.

The board is of the opinion that a fair minimum wage for experienced minors should be no less than $14 per week.

The board is of the opinion that a fair minimum wage for apprentices shall be no less than $12 per week.

The board is of the opinion that a fair minimum wage for learners shall be no less than $10 per week.

DEFINITIONS

WOMEN'S CLOTHING OCCUPATION: All manufacturing of coats, suits, skirts, dresses, waists, underwear, neckwear, millinery and allied lines.

MINIMUM WAGE: No experienced adult shall be made from the minimum hourly wage rate established by the Minimum Wage Commission.

No experienced minor receiving regular pay for age, injury or physical or mental impairment, shall be made from the minimum wage rate established by the Minimum Wage Commission.

WAITING TIME: Time during which employees are required to remain on the employer's premises and to work shall be regarded as working time and paid for at the minimum wage rate established for such employees.

CERTIFICATE OF AGE: Every employer shall keep on file and available for inspection by the Minimum Wage Commission the name, address and occupation of each minor employed, together with a record of the date of birth of such minor, and the wages paid to each week to each such employee. Such record shall be evidence of such employment as the Minimum Wage Commission may require.

STATEMENT TO EMPLOYEES: The employer shall give to each employee at the time this order becomes effective and thereafter at the time of hiring of each employee, a wage rate sheet showing the minimum wage rate established by this order for the employee in the occupation in which such employee is employed, and the number of hours per week which constitute full time employment at such rate, and such other and further notices as the Commission may require.

A public hearing will be held by the Minimum Wage Commission at the State House on Wednesday, January 13, 1937, at 2:00 o'clock, P. M., at which time and place any person desiring recommendations of the wage board may be heard in relation thereto. Let America Organize Against Communism

THE OBLIGATION TO DEFEND AMERICAN DEMOCRACY against Communism has been indelibly impressed upon the people of our country by the solemn admonition from the sickbed of Pope Pius XI.

The principles of democracy in which American liberties are secure are endangered by the Communist menace, which the Pope describes as:

"A new menace more threatening than ever before FOR THE WHOLE WORLD and principally for Europe and its Christian civilization."

The Pope has given timely warning of the evils Communism imposes upon the civilization and the religion and the democratic institutions of all nations.

AMERICA MUST ORGANIZE AGAINST THOSE EVILS.

Our greatest purpose as a nation must be to preserve the wholesome ideals we have so long and so well utilized for the enrichment of our people.

AMERICANS have no need to speculate upon what form of government will assure their welfare as a people and their integrity as a nation.

THEY HAVE THAT FORM OF GOVERNMENT and have had it for more than a century and a half.

They intend to retain the democratic form of government which has proved its worth IN TERMS OF AMERICAN PROGRESS.

America does not want Communism.

America does not want Fascism.

AMERICA WANTS DEMOCRACY, AND WILL RETAIN DEMOCRACY.

Pope Pius has cried out from the shadow of death to warn America NOT TO LET DOWN ITS GUARD AGAINST THE SPREAD OF ATHEISTIC COMMUNISM which seeks the subversion of civilization.

He has made it clear TO AMERICA that the "horror of hatred, of carnage and destruction" that has been visited upon Spain is what America MUST AVOID.

THE devastation wrought by Communism in the countries it has ravished is viewed in sorrow by the Pope who says:

"Here are signs and portents of terrifying reality of what is being prepared for Europe AND FOR THE WHOLE WORLD if they do not hasten to adopt the necessary remedies of DEFENSE."

This TERRIFYING REALITY must never reach American shores.

It will not, if we keep inviolate the democratic principles given us as our heritage of freedom.

They are the NECESSARY REMEDIES OF OUR DEFENSE.

American democracy is the IMPERISHABLE BARRIER we have raised against Communism, against Fascism AND FOR THE PERPETUATION OF OUR CHERISHED IDEALS OF AMERICAN LIBERTY.

India's Untouchables

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Edwin C. Hill

"Henceforth there shall be no restriction placed on a Hindu by birth or religion to prevent him from entering or worshiping at temples controlled by the Travancore government."

Such is the edict sent out by the Maharajah of Travancore, a highly enlightened young man of 26 who is attempting to rule his 5,000,000 subjects by a twentieth century code which he acquired through his education at the university of England.

Mahatma Gandhi, in his hut in a squalid village in Central India, hears of the edict and smiles a toothless smile of delight. At last, his work is bearing real fruit!

Perhaps this is the opening wedge, the first step in the final and full emancipation of the 60,000,000 untouchables. If the unclean may enter the temple, certainly there should be no other place barred to them. For there is no other place more sacred or higher than the temple.

Of course, Travancore is not the whole of India. It is, in fact, only a small state in the vast empire which honors 350,000,000 souls, one-fifth of all on earth. Its untouchables number less than one-thirtieth of all their kind in India. But once broken down, systems such as that of caste in India, are prone to rapid disintegration.

Nothing on earth is so cruel or loathsome as the treatment of the untouchables in India. No people's condition, at any time in history, has been more terrible.

A DOOMED CLASS

From birth until death the untouchable is doomed to abject poverty, to ostracism and to the life of a scavenger. He is a social leper in the strictest sense of the term. He is the lowest of the five major castes of the Hindus. He must slum the temples, the meeting places, the schools and the homes of those of the higher caste.

He must not drink from their wells. In certain states he must keep a specified distance between himself and a Brahmin, who is of the highest caste. He must marry within his caste. Nobility of character, ambition or even education, if by miracle such may be attained, mean nothing.

Always the untouchable is "vile and unclean." When Gandhi was a world figure a few years ago, his loincloth was a subject of much jesting.

The heedless buffoons did not know that the loincloth is the symbol of the untouchables and that Gandhi wore it as such. Frock coats and high hats were not unknown attire for the skinny little lawyer. He had worn them in South Africa and other places. But the loincloth is in many cases the sole, earthly possession of the untouchable.

Gandhi, in adopting it, did so to focus attention to their poverty and their plight. Incidentally, while he is not in the headlines at present, Gandhi has not lost any of his popularity with the masses in India.

The question naturally arises as to why millions of persons have put up with this bondage for centuries. The answer is that it has been religion to them and that they have lacked individualism.

A POWERFUL GROUP

Until recent years the untouchable accepted his position as a matter of fate. He had been doomed to it for some transgression he, or his ancestors, had committed in a previous existence. At first, he was surprised no doubt, by the pity expressed by non-Hindus. Then he himself began to question the reasonableness of his resignation to his lot.

Education came slowly and, with it, leaders from his own ranks. Outsiders, missionaries, especially, began to hold out to him the acceptance of other religions as a method of escape. At the present time there is considerable talk of this abandonment of the Hindu religion.

Gandhi is using his influence against it in counseling the untouchables to remain Hindus. However, the fear the wholesale apostacy on the part of the untouchables is registering upon the higher castes and bringing them to a mood of granting concessions.

The 60,000,000 untouchables, "vile and unclean" though they may be, are a power politically and in a sectarian sense. Whether he meant to or not, the Maharajah of Travancore recognized this power in his abolition of untouchability.

The course taken by other Hindu rulers will be interesting if not epochal.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, Dec. 29—Robert Benchley cracks the critics' undo. They shall not laugh", by stating when he funnyhone is tickled at a premiere. There are times when he almost stops the show. His most recent exclusion was over the writings of Jimmy Durante, the vocal acrobatics of Ina Ray Hutton lifted.

The high brow boys came out for W. C. Fields in the stage version of "Poppy." Critics can rarely agree, but this rule too has been tied. Notably by Alan Dale, who maligned the hearty hobnobbing over the brief bit by Barbara Stanwyck in "The Noose." A bit that shot her to audee stardom.

The critics do go in for a sly pun now and then. The late lamented Percy Hammond could not stop a straight face when Bert Williams put on his pantomime on-noon poker game. Even after seeing it a number of times. And Hammond was the Death Watch's unwilling victim.

Is Benchley illustrative. Is not enthusiastic gulfweed for the humor of others are by humorists themselves. No one is a better audience for a funny story than Franklin P. Sullivan. Mark Twain finally quit going to see Joe Jefferson because he made such a fool of himself laughing.

Arthur Gordon, a Yale graduate, is a recent addition to the editorial staff of Good Housekeeping. He was keen enough to round out his education with a scholarship won at Oxford. Asked by a fellow editor what he thought of American education methods after two years in England's sanctuary of learning, he replied that in many respects they excel the British. "Although," he added, "I may be seeing everything now through Rhodes-colored glasses."

New York once had four prosperous roof theaters, but only one remains—The Bayes, named for unforgettable Nora who dedicated it with a one-woman cast in a cycle of songs. The others were the Midnight Frolic Roof, The New York Theater Roof and the Century Roof.

The Midnight Frolic was the best known and most prosperous, the first big time spot for Will Rogers to show his wares and his springboard to stardom. It is now a garage.

The New York Roof was the scene of the first Follies and where the enchanting Lillian Lorraine floated over the audience in a swing of roses. The roof had its biggest vogue during prohibition. Today, the naked revues it exploited are elaborated in the hairy-like floor shows of dollar dinner cabarets.

Still another collapsing entertainment nature along Broadway is the dim Chinese restaurant. For a time they outnumbered other types of eating places along the grand boulevard and were largest. Their booths and waiters who knocked discreetly before entering appealed especially to young handholders. And many offered a hang-up dinner with dancing at $2 extra.

There are a few left, but more than a dozen closed in the Lobster Reil this winter. People who enjoy Chinese food would rather chow-chow in the Oriental atmosphere of Chinatown, down dingy cellars of Pell and Mott streets.

There is no doubt big restaurants are suffering from the flood of brightly lit, white enameled steel and counter places that descended like locusts. They dish it in fairly good food and offer it as a specialty of excellent coffee and no tipping. They are the entertainment places for pianos and stenographers. Such notables as Ed Wynn, John Golden, and Grant Gill visit them for a quick bite.

Jack Dempsey, a non-smoker during his road-kid days and through his long reign as champion, for one of the most furious cigarists of the local scene. Like most smokers, he started off with one after each meal and has now reached an average quota of 25 a day. And when Dempsey smokes, he smokes. No idle puffing. He burns a cigar hurriedly right up to the quick.

Nothing makes a fellow feel so hopelessly decrepit as to arrive at a party in mufti and find everybody in full dress splendor. A friend from out of town, here on a hurried visit, got into this predicament last evening. All were strangers save the host, who was at a telephone. My friend adjusted a curtain, straightened a rug and moved a few chairs as though he were a houseman. And tacked out and fled.

Listen, World!

PAINLESS INDUSTRY—there's the first requisite of a successful career, according to many modern Timons.

I was when we took our jobs as we did our castor oil—with grim endurance.

Work, we were constantly reminded, was the original curse laid upon disobedient Adam, and sensible folk accepted it as such. Some jobs were fun part of the time, and all jobs were fun some of the time, but no one but a looney expected any job to be fun all of the time.

Suddenly the Motor Age arrived and everything was changed. In came the machine age; out went elbow grease, sweat and sacrifice, we decided, were no longer necessary. Only saps worked. Smart folks sat around and let the push buttons do it.

TELLS THE TRUTH

Forthwith, all of our better minds began looking for the easiest way to accomplish both ends. Book shelves were loaded with Happy Hints on How to Live and Like It. Parliamentary pundits are forming a movement to take the MOAN out of matrimony and the TRY out of industry.

Which is certainly a sweet notion, if you can get by with it. But now comes Ida M. Tarbell —the old meanie!—and blasts the whole racket to smithereens in the December issue of COSMOPOLITAN. And Ida oughtta know better.

For fifty-six of her seventy-nine years she has been a writer. How writing, as everyone knows, is supposed to be one of those things that just bubble up spontaneously. You don't have to "WORK" at writing—you just sit still and let literature happen.

Such, I repeat, is the popular notion of writing—a notion enthusiastically accepted by several hundred thousand yearning amateurs who are having a perfectly good time sitting around waiting to become geniuses—while someone else does the breakfast dishes. And now Miss Tarbell upsets everything by announcing that there isn't a word of truth in it!

WRITING, announces this heartless woman, IS HARD WORK. And then proceeds to paint this revolting picture of the author's travail.

NEVER A "SNAP"

"I have never in my life," says she, "undertaken a fresh piece of work that I have not been obliged to take myself by the scruff of the neck and seat myself at my desk and keep my hand on the scruff until my revolt had subsided."

Moreover, she continued that it is quite impossible to stay idle and be happy. For "this is a working universe . . . there is no spot in it which stands still. Every star is on the move."

The earth tolerates no dead beats; it keeps everything busy.

IF I AM TO BE HAPPY IN THIS STEADY WORKING WORLD I MUST WORK, TOO; otherwise I'll suffer discomfort, uneasiness . . . There is a vast unhappiness, inexplicable to those in affluence, which comes from idleness in a working world. The idle are self-destructive as would be a star which announced that it was going to stand still for an aeon or two."

Nor does she, you'll note, say a word about your job being fun or even congenial. To the contrary she calmly announces that work is never a snap. It always "carries with it fatigue, disappointment, failure, revolt."

In short—THERE IS NO PAINLESS INDUSTRY! And only sissies demand it.

Philanthropy At New Low

TODAY'S press dispatches contain two interesting items, one a marked contrast of the other.

"United States income has increased to sixty billion dollars and the nation's business is 'out of the red' for the first time since 1929," says the annual report of the Department of Commerce in Washington.

Adds the year's analysis published in New York by Charles V. Vickrey, secretary of the national committee for relief and welfare recovery:

"A new low for the last eleven years has been reached in contributions to charitable institutions, with two cents of every dollar the average gift."

Business income on the rise, philanthropy on the decrease—many will recall the cancelling a few months ago of a $165,000 bequest to Harvard University by the late Jesse I. Straus.

Retention of the bequest would have forced his estate into hasty liquidation because of the extent of the present inheritance taxes and menaced the bequests to his widow and children, Mr. Straus feared.

The many that recall this will ask themselves whether other well-to-do and charitable-minded persons, writing their wills, share Mr. Straus' fear.

One answer, probably, is in today's contrasting news dispatches.

Holidays Now Doomsdays

CHRISTMAS that should be the happiest day of the year was the saddest for 516 families in America. That many persons were killed during the holidays in automobile accidents.

The number, exceeding by far the 444 killed on the Fourth of July, should alarm the nation. For if the coffins of these victims were placed end to end, there would be a grim line stretching nearly three-quarters of a mile, or almost as far as the eye can see.

Such a situation is a challenge to police departments, highway officials and everyone controlling motor vehicle licensing and highways.

And it is up to them to act speedily and effectively before all American holidays become highway Doomsdays.

Let Women Do It

THE world no sooner lifts its gaze from Mrs. Simpson than another woman sails high into the heavens of national and international —maybe—affairs.

Mme. Chiang-Kai-Shek, wife of the kidnaped Chinese premier, flew to the headquarters of Marshal Chang and arranged for a three-day armistice for the scheduled civil war.

Women may cause trouble but they also bring peace.

That's That

While war clouds hang over Europe and Asia, the prospects for continuance of peace on the American continent are bright. Lloyds will write insurance against war damage to property ONLY IN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA. The fact that it considers these are the only countries which are safe from war for the immediate future should be a source of the deepest gratification to every American. And it is a demonstration that we are practicing the peaceful policies we have been preaching.

Connie Mack, who has just celebrated his seventy-fourth birthday, is still manager of the Philadelphia Athletics and has no thought of retiring. "I feel today," he says, "just as I did thirty-six years ago when I gathered together the first athletic club. I am happy that I am still in baseball and hope to continue in it indefinitely." Birthdays are no measure of the age of a man who is active and who has an interest in life.

On his birthday, Connie Mack had his usual lunch of milk and crackers. There is no infallible recipe for longevity. But moderation in all things, moderation in eating and drinking, add to the chances of every normal person for a long life. Many people are in more danger of eating and drinking themselves to death than they are of starving.

Reports from Washington, D. C., that the Administration appears to have abandoned its plan for creation of forty-eight little AAA's—one in each of the States—are encouraging. The difficulty experienced in bringing the States to set up unemployment insurance systems should be enough to cause the Administration to give up the idea of a separate AAA in every State.

Continuance of the AAA on a nation-wide scale, spending one-half billion dollars a year, as a permanent program is utterly without justification. Financial aid to farmers who are broke, during a period of depression, is one thing. But governmental subsidies to farmers who are well-to-do and prospering are an entirely different matter. Under the AAA plan, Federal checks go to farmers, whether they are rich or poor.

There is no reason why the American people should be taxed to pay farmers to admit and consent that people who add to the value of the land owned by these farmers. Any good farmer would do this anyway. The poor farmer who is financially unable to take the proper precautions against soil erosion may be entitled to assistance from the government. But under the present system, farm subsidies are distributed irrespective of need.

Keeping a house painted adds to the value of that building. But home owners are not allowed a government check if they will paint their houses every year. There would be just as much sense in subsidizing city residents for taking care of their homes as there is in paying farmers to keep up the fertility of their lands, use good agricultural methods, and safeguard their fields against erosion.

Japan's Ship Program

Reprinted From "Oriental Economist" of Tokio

To facilitate foreign trade expansion and augument shipping revenue, the communications department considers it necessary that Japan expend in the next four or five years close to 150,000,000 yen in shipping construction and shipbuilding subsidies and other related projects.

The marine transportation policy as embodied in the department's proposed budget estimates covers the following: Shipping subsidies, 106,000,000 yen for four years; amplifying banking and credit facilities for the shipbuilding industry, 6,000,000 yen; expanding the marine inspection and surveying office, 4,167,000 yen for three years, or a total of 116,871,000 yen.

Of this amount the communications authorities intend to expend 26,000,000 yen in the first year.

Although the whole scheme is subject to the approval of the cabinet and then by the Diet, it is by far the most ambitious ever conceived by the authorities here.

The most important feature of the plan is the proposed building subsidy for superior vessels for which demand is worth while. Under the conditions of merchant fleet or for national defense purposes.

After England and America, Japan is ranked third as a nation relative to respect to shipping tonnage, but the same thing can not be said of the quality of the shipping.

To correct that defect and to build a fleet of super vessels is, therefore, properly the central theme of the Communications Department's marine policy.

A significant fact about the present marine policy is the straight encouragement of new building as contrasted to the old policy of a scrap-and-build principle.

Since 1932 Japan has been engaged in improving ship's quality, and at present the build program in accordance with that principle is in progress.

In the first program 460,000 tons of old ships were demolished, and in their place 200,000 tons of superior cargo boats were built during the three years from 1932.

Similarly, the second and third plans were enforced in the fiscal years 1933 and 1934, with five subsidy of 1,250,000 yen each, building 50,000 tons of ships against an equal tonnage scrapped per year.

The scrap-and-build system has been abandoned mainly because of the complaint from shipping circles that large shipping interests alone were the beneficiaries of the plan and by the Diet system, the smaller concerns being left out entirely, while there were not enough funds for ship's available.

Eighteen shipping companies have received subsidies as the three ship quality improvement measures since 1932, with five of the largest corporations' share was 83 per cent of the total tonnage built under the subsidy plans as follows:

Nippon Yusen Kaisha, eight ships, 58,000 tons, or 29 per cent; Mitsui Bussan Kaisha, eight ships, 52,000 tons, or 17 per cent; Toyo Kisen Kaisha, four ships, 29,000 tons, or 9 per cent; Kokusai Kisen Kaisha, four ships, 26,000 tons, or 8 per cent; Osaka Shosen Kaisha, five ships, 24,000 tons, or 8 per cent.

The number of eligible old ships has been growing low because of continued shipping activity, the Japanese fleet of this class of vessels under their own scrap-and-build scheme, and the political inheritance left to Europe which for the time being reduced surplus tonnage to a nominal, to count only the principal factors.

The communications department, therefore, had to withdraw the scrapping condition and decided to make use of building as much tonnage as possible, specifying better speed for each tonnage.

On the other hand, in order to facilitate the working of the subsidy system is discriminatory in favor of large shipbuilders, it has been to amplify banking and credit facilities for shipping concerns, and subsidies equal to interest at 2 per cent per annum on building loans will be granted, a ten-year time provision being made to indemnify banks for any loss due to shipping loans.

All these steps are calculated to eliminate credit trouble for small shipowners and to encourage banks to adopt a more liberal loan policy toward shipping concerns in general.
